Fire Started Between the Windows of Girls' Room, Probe Discloses—Funeral Services Held.

BY THOMAS E. BROOKS.

Working on the theory that the fire in which Marion and Willie Mattee McDowell were burned to death in their home in Decatur early Tuesday morning was of incendiary origin, Decatur police Tuesday night arrested two suspects and lodged them in the DeKalb county jail on a blanket charge of suspicion.

Those arrested were Dimple Nix, negro, former servant in the McDowell home who was discharged a few days ago, and her husband, Johnnie Nix. They were put through a severe grilling at the jail, but emphatically denied any connection with the fatal fire. They were placed in cells for the night to await further investigation and questioning this morning.

The two arrests were made after authorities learned that Mrs. McDowell had discharged the negroes when she found several articles of silver and crockery to be missing and that the Nix woman appeared resentful of the fact that her services were dispensed with. Both she and her husband claimed to have been asleep at the hour the fire was discovered.

The negroes were arrested by M. H. Phillips, chief of the DeKalb county police force, and O. G. McConnell and W. T. Morgan, of the Decatur force. Johnnie Nix was found at the home of his brother in the rear of a residence on South McDonough street, Decatur. His wife was arrested where she is living in the rear of 41 Austin avenue, Atlanta.

The theory that the fire was of accidental origin, caused either by a defective flue or by defective wiring, was accepted early Tuesday by Chief Googer, of the Decatur police force, but after an examination of the scene of the fatal blaze the chief was requested to assign a man to the case to assist officially in a more thorough investigation. This request was granted and O. G. McConnell, city police officer, was detailed for the work.

Careful examination of the room occupied by the two girls disclosed that the fire was centered in a corner between the two windows across the room from the fire place where there had been no fire for several days. The floor immediately around the fire place is hardly scorched, showing this was probably the last part of the room to be reached by the fire and eliminating the possibility that the fire was caused by a defective flue.

An accurate examination of the

REPORT RADICALS CAUSED MUTINY OF FRENCH TROOPS

German and French 'Reds' Are Organizing, Say Intelligence Reports to the French Authorities.

CIVILIANS REPLACE POLICE IN ESSEN

Railroaders on Lines Turned Over by British to Invaders Call Strike Tuesday.

Essen, Germany, February 20.—German and French communists are actively co-operating to undermine the Franco-Belgian Ruhr adventure, according to all indications.

Communist propaganda has already caused the mutiny of one French regiment, reports current Tuesday stated, and this detachment has been replaced by another.

Intelligence reports made to the French military authorities here in Essen state that secret military companies of communists are being formed throughout the Ruhr and the Rhineland and that arms, in large quantities, are being obtained from sources not yet revealed.

Efforts of the radical French and German propagandists who have been commissioned to undermine the morale of the troops, have become more open since many of the Ruhr local officials have been expelled and police forces of several cities either reduced or disbanded.

Fear "Red" Menace.

The inhabitants of the region fear this new "red menace" as much as the French authorities, because local officials hold that a general uprising would give M. Poincare the chance he is looking for—a course of unrestrained ruthlessness in the occupied region. Another fear of the populace is that Britain, if conditions become much worse than they are in the Ruhr and Rhineland, will grant the French permission to use all the railroad lines through the Cologne area and, perhaps, withdraw the British army of occupation, leaving the natives in that region also at the mercy of the French.

Causes Concern.

Socialists of the Essen "sector" are confident that, through the influence of their propaganda, they will force peace negotiations between France and Germany within a month. The demand of the social democrats that a peace conference be called and "reasonable" reparations terms agreed upon, is causing grave concern to the nationalists, in view of the fact that the socialists are willing to bring about

Interest Is Mounting In Greatest Southern Automobile Exhibits

Approximately 50 More Distributors Arrive in Atlanta Tuesday to Witness Exhibition.

20-PIECE ORCHESTRA PLAYS FOR CROWDS

Many Expressions of Congratulation From Visitors From All Parts of the South Are Received.

With public interest mounting steadily and the crowds increasing daily, the Southern Automobile show, declared by out-of-town visitors of national prominence in the automobile industry to be far more beautiful and complete than any show ever held in the south, experienced another successful day, both in sales and attendance Tuesday.

Coming from all sections of the south, approximately 50 distributors of cars exhibited at the show arrived in the city Tuesday and Tuesday night. Many confessed complete amazement as to the magnitude and beauty of the show Tuesday, which all agree is a masterpiece of the interior decorating art.

As many more representatives are expected to arrive today and district dealers who have exhibitions at the show are confident that new high records in automobile sales will be established within the next few days as the distributors are here not only to see the show but to buy as well.

20-Piece Band Plays.

Tuesday's exhibition was featured by a special musical program by the 20-piece local orchestra under the direction of J. A. Scharf, noted orchestra leader. All through the Auditorium thousands strolled along the aisles and passageways Tuesday to music as charming and delightful as has ever reverberated from the walls of the Auditorium on any similar occasion.

The evident enthusiasm with which the public greeted this special feature of the show has led the management to prevail upon Mr. Scharf to consent to the arrangement of a similar program for today's exhibition to accommodate the new arrivals.

Congratulations and expressions of pleasure by the visitors were the order of the day Tuesday, many of them declaring that they would visit the show again before it closes Saturday evening, it was announced by Virgil Shepard, manager.

Says It Is Great Show.

J. A. Haskell, district manager of the Marmon Motor company, Indianapolis, Ind., who is visiting the show, declared Tuesday that he had seen all of the automobile shows in the United States this year, and that neither the

HARDING PROPOSAL OF COTTON TREATY TO BE CONSIDERED

Cotton States Governors Named by Weevil Conference to Arrange Interstate Pact.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE CONTRIBUTES $73,261

Weevil Conference Speakers at First Session Urge Importance of Overcoming Cotton Pest.

The first day's development in the national cotton conference for boll weevil control, that convened in Atlanta Tuesday morning, includes:

1. Announcement of subscriptions amounting to $73,261 by members of the New York cotton exchange to assist in carrying on the nation-wide war against the boll weevil.

2. Pledges of support to the campaign against the "billion dollar bandit" by prominent planters, the New York cotton exchange, the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' association, and by members of the Rotary, Civitan, Lions' and Kiwanis Clubs of Atlanta.

3. The appointment of committees on resolutions, and organization, and the appointment of Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, of Georgia, as chairman of a special committee to consider the cotton states joint treaty to co-operate and co-ordinate their forces in fighting the "Mexican invader."

4. The appointment of the governors of the southern states, by Governor Hardwick, as members of this committee to consider the president's proposal.

Hutchison Presides.

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchison, managing director of the national campaign for boll weevil control, presided over the conference, and named Georgia governor to act as chairman of the committee to consider President Harding's plan.

The afternoon session was marked by a number of notable speeches, including those of George M. Shutt, president of the New York Cotton exchange; W. P. Conyers, a prominent planter of Hartsville, S. C., who spoke for ex-Governor R. I. Manning, of South Carolina, who was unable to attend because of other urgent business; S. J. Cassels, vice-president of the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' association, and Colonel Harvie Jordan, of the American Cotton association.

Mr. Shutt concluded his address by handing an envelope to Dr. Hutchison containing checks and pledges for $73,261, as a donation of the exchange members toward financing the war on the weevil. This is the second large subscription that has been set aside for work in the boll weevil "war," the first being the offer of $1,000 by the national council of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association for

A Flour for Every Family---for Every Use---for Every Pocketbook

EVERY home uses flour. It is one of the most staple commodities handled by our 160 stores. We know that once a housewife buys a grade of flour that pleases her—that gives entire satisfaction—that usually that housewife continues to buy that same grade of flour. The grades of flour—the quality of the flour—generally speaking, fixes in the minds of grocery patrons the standard of quality found in practically all other lines of goods handled by that store.

Recognizing this, the L. W. Rogers Company could not afford to have in their stores anything but good, high-class flour—ranging from a flour that will give general satisfaction—a big value for the money—to the very highest superlative patent flour that can possibly be milled, and yet a flour that we can sell at a price usually much lower than elsewhere on many so-called high-grade flours.

For twelve years the J. Allen Smith Co., who stand at the very top as millers in the south—or as flour manufacturers anywhere, for that matter—have been producing for us our brands of high-grade flour. Milled for us under our own name, it had to be good—IT MUST BE GOOD.

White Lily---Superlative Patent---$1.29

First under these brands comes Rogers White Lily flour. Positively a masterpiece of the miller's art. It is made from soft winter wheat of the highest quality. It is of such superlative quality that only about 20 per cent of the wheat grain goes into it in the milling process, and that comes from the very heart of the grain itself. We are stating positive facts when we say that only a very few mills in this country even try to manufacture a competitive flour to White Lily. This is a flour that positively has no superior for pastries and cakes—so white, so delicate.

White Lily flour is, indeed, made for pastries and cakes, though in the hands of experienced cooks it bakes, too, the most exquisite of biscuits. In the last two years the demand for this flour has increased more than 300 per cent., and is steadily growing. This is ample evidence that it must be—not only good—but UNUSUALLY FINE. Why pay 15 to 25 cents more for a 24-pound sack of flour that is not near so pure—so white—so delicate as White Lily—a flour that produces the most satisfactory baking results?

Rogers' La Rosa

Fancy Patent

$1.07

Do not compare these two grades of flour with cheap flour, simply because we offer them to you for a short time at prices away below prices elsewhere for grades in their class.

Both La Rosa and No. 37 are our own standard flours for general use. La Rosa is a high-grade fancy patent. No. 37 is the same flour with self-rising ingredients in it. We have sold millions of these sacks and have never heard anything but praise for either of them. Either of them is just as good as any family could desire. For all baking purposes they stand at the top. Better lay in a supply now at the price we are quoting.

Pollard Offers Letter Showing He Feared Harm

Defendant in Murder Trial Submits Note He Wrote Before Death of Girl.

Richmond, Va., February 20.—The dramatic point in the direct testimony of Thomas Pollard, prominent young business man on trial in hustings court here for the murder of his former stenographer, Mrs. Thelma Ham Richardson, was reached late today when the defendant produced a sealed note which he said he penned four days before Mrs. Richardson was killed and in which a request was made that should he meet with violent death she should be "dealt with as hard as possible."

"If I am killed," the note said, "and any jury in Virginia should turn her loose it would be a blot on the state forever."

The unopened note was produced by the defendant and passed to Judge D. C. Richardson, who broke the seal and read it. The prosecution offered no objection to the missive and it was read to the jury.

Says He Feared Death.

The text follows: "This is to certify that Thelma H. Richardson swore on last Friday that she would kill me and if I should be found dead, please see that she is dealt with as hard as possible. Mr. A. G. Quarles, Jr., knows how she has said several times she would kill me. Also on last Friday she said that all she would have to do was to say the word and I would be killed and she would not have to do it herself. All of this was said because I said she had to leave the office. I have always stood by her in every way and she was operated on about January 1 and Mrs. Bennett and Herring will prove to you that I risked everything for her and anyone, such as Mr. Quarles or H. R. Woodward, can tell you of the things I have gone through with. If I am killed and any jury in Virginia should turn her loose, it would be a blot on the state forever.

(Signed) "THOMAS POLLARD." "P. S. I am living under a nervous strain, can not tell when anything will happen, but am living a pure life and that is the reason I am trying to rid myself of her."

Comes As Climax.

Pollard's story of the shooting came as the climax to his direct examination, which lasted for several hours. With Hiram Smith, his chief counsel, Pollard re-enacted the scene which he told the jury took place on the lawn of his home on the night of December 11.

The accused man told the jury that when he went home that evening, he met his little daughter coming out of the house. Mrs. Pollard was visiting Mrs. S. Parke Register, he said, and the little girl had just run down the stairs from the Pollard apartment. He met her in the doorway, he said, and greeted her with "hello, pig," that being the pet name by which he called her.

But his child, the father said, refused to speak to him and went out of the house and climbed into her grandfather's automobile which stood in the street. Pollard said he went to his room and sat upon the bed. He said he wept because of his child's coldness. Then it was, he testified, that he decided to "have it over" with Mrs. Richardson.

In detailing the fatal shooting of the pretty divorcee, a short time later, Pollard said he and Mrs. Richardson were on the lawn. In his hand was a pistol, which, he said, he had taken from Mrs. Richardson a few minutes before when she threatened to kill him. He said the woman plunged at him and he thrust out both hands to ward off the attack. The pistol touched her breast, he said. She grabbed the weapon, the defendant declared, and it was discharged. Mrs. Richardson crumpled to the ground, mortally wounded.

Testimony Conflicts. Admitting that the pistol was in his hand at the time the shot was fired, Pollard insisted that his finger was not on the trigger at any time until he used the weapon to prevent J. Mosby West, who drove Mrs. Richardson to the Pollard home, from leaving the scene.

Two points in Pollard's testimony conflicted with the testimony of West. The latter testified that he did not enter the Pollard yard until after the shot was fired and that Pollard did not threaten him with the weapon to prevent his leaving the scene.

Pollard told the jury today that West was standing between Mrs. Richardson and himself a moment before the woman sprang at him in an effort to regain possession of the pistol. Regarding West's attempt to leave the scene after the shooting, Pollard said: "As West ran I pointed the pistol at him, put my finger on the trigger and said: 'Come back, d—n you, West; you stay here, you brought her'."

During his long examination, Pollard admitted improper relations with the dead woman, but insisted that such relations began some time after she was divorced from her husband, Herbert Richardson. He declared that his relations with Mrs. Bertha Louise Beck, alleged "other woman" in the case, were of the "purest type."

"She is the most wonderful person I have ever seen," the defendant said. Later under cross-examination by Special Prosecutor Byrd, Pollard declared that next to his mother he did not know a "better person." Pollard completed his direct examination late today and for about an hour, prior to the adjournment of court, he was under the fire of a withering cross-examination by Mr. Byrd. He will resume the stand tomorrow, the prosecutor intimated tonight.

DELAY DECISION ON SENATE PROBE OF VETS' BUREAU

Washington, February 20.—A decision regarding proposed investigation of the veterans' bureau, including charges of waste, extravagance and improper administration was postponed today by the special senate committee headed by Senator Sutherland, republican, West Virginia, until Friday.

Brigadier General Sawyer was before the committee today in executive session and was said to have given information regarding several bureau affairs particularly pertaining to disposal of army supplies property at Perryville, Md. General Sawyer was said to be of the opinion that from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 of blankets, towels and other surplus war supplies, turned over to the veterans' bureau by the war department had been sold at too low a price and at times over his objection. Much of the property, it was said, might have been used by other government departments but a large part went to private purchasers at 20 cents on the dollar.

General Sawyer was said to have given the opinion that a congressional investigation of the bureau, such as is being considered by the senate committee might not be objectionable if conducted along proper lines and with a view to aiding the new administration of the bureau, but he was also said to have expressed the view that an investigation might become such as to hamper the new administration.

There was said to be growing opinion among republican leaders in the senate that a congressional inquiry of the bureau better await the reforms expected from the new administration after a successor is chosen to Director Forbes.

JUDGE MISQUOTED, DISMISSES STATES

Barrett's Ban on Indiscriminate Search Does Not Prevent Investigations Without Warrants.

Practice of Georgia prohibition officers of searching cars for whiskey was not condemned by Federal Judge William H. Barrett, of Savannah, in his recent decision, and none of the cases in which defendants were released were made by members of the state squad, according to Fred D. Dismuke, prohibition director, who returned Tuesday from Savannah where he and J. W. Powell, legal adviser of the squad, conferred with Judge Barrett relative to the decision.

During that Judge Barrett's decision had been grossly misquoted, Mr. Dismuke stated that the decision was nothing more or less than an interpretation of the law as it has applied since the enforcement officers began their duties under the Volstead act.

Search Not Forbidden. Officers are not forbidden to search cars without a warrant, Mr. Dismuke stated, and the decision of Judge Barrett does not touch in any way the activities of the officers working under the state director.

But Judge Barrett ruled, stated Mr. Dismuke, "is that indiscriminate searches of automobiles is illegal. To illustrate, if an officer placed himself on a highway and held up every car that came along, taking chances on finding liquor in perhaps one out of every ten, then he would be violating the decision of Judge Barrett."

"But if an officer has reason to believe that the car is transporting liquor, then he is entitled to search, regardless of whether he has a warrant. This is the policy we have been adhering to, and the decision of Judge Barrett does not in any way affect us."

Cases Dismissed. "The cases mentioned in press dispatches as having been dismissed under Judge Barrett's ruling were not made by any of my men. These cases were made by general prohibition agents working out of Washington, and the cases were dismissed because there were illegal searches and seizures."

"Take for example the case where the car was released, after having been confiscated by the federal agent who discovered upon searching that there was whiskey in a number of suit cases which were being unloaded from the machine. This is simple and illustrates the point well."

"In that case, the prohibition agent had no reason whatever for believing that the car in question contained whiskey. There was no outward indication that would lead an officer to suspect that whiskey was being transported. This being the case, the car was released under Judge Barrett's decision."

"Now in regard to lawful search and seizure, it is the same as it has been. If an officer has cause to believe that the law is being violated in his presence, then he has a right to make searches or arrests."

Repeats Instructions. "My men are under instructions the same as they have been all along. These are, in effect, the following: If the appearance of an automobile or its occupants is such that would reasonably lead an agent to believe that whiskey was being transported, then he is entitled to make an investigation. The appearance of an automobile or its occupants may mean this: The car may be coming from a district known to produce whiskey; the driver may be known to the officers as a whiskey runner; the whiskey itself may be leaking, furnishing scent; the nature of the material in the vehicle may lead an officer to believe liquor is being carried; then he has a right to search."

"Only a matter of difference in opinion has figured in any of the cases which my men have brought before the federal judges. Only one automobile has been released because of illegal steps in seizure—and my men have handled hundreds."

Mr. Dismuke stated that his men were working subject to reprimand by the federal judges, and that no reprimand had been issued, thus proving that the officers have been within their rights in enforcing the Volstead act.

COLORED MINISTERS TO HELP BIG BETHEL

A resolution offered by Rev. C. A. Wingfield and unanimously adopted by the A. M. E. Ministers' union in the chapel of Morris Brown university Tuesday morning, pledged support to the pastor and members of Big Bethel A. M. E. Church in rebuilding Bethel, which was recently destroyed by fire. More than 300 A. M. E. churches and missions in a radius of 100 miles of Atlanta and Morris Brown university, will raise a special fund and the ministers will make a personal donation and get their members to do likewise.

Bishop J. S. Flipper, J. A. Hadley, C. M. Manning, J. H. McFarlin, H. D. Canady and others commended the resolution. Rev. R. H. Ward, president of the union, urged the ministers to make liberal donations. Rev. H. H. Singleton, pastor, stated that the church was much in need of funds but would be rebuilt immediately.

At the close of the meeting Rev. J. T. Wilkerson, delivered an address, "Are Evangelists a Hindrance or a Help to the Minister?"

Railways or motor cars, that is the question in Norway. The progressive country, where the sun stays up all night six months in the year, is planning a program of transportation expansion to cover the next forty years and one of the problems involved in the planning is whether it is advisable to establish automobile routes instead building branch and local railway lines.

There are more than 500 industrial laboratories in the United States which are more or less actively engaged in scientific research.

USE ARMY TRANSPORT FOR FLOATING SCHOOL

Asa Candler, Jr., Contracts With Bethlehem Company to Remodel Ship.

Baltimore, Md., February 20.—Asa G. Candler, Jr., son of the millionaire Coca-Cola king, of Atlanta, has arrived in this city and completed arrangements for the conversion of the former army transport Logan into a sumptuous sea-world-as-you-study college for boys. The work will be done by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation.

With 400 boys, a large faculty, a crew, managers and clerks of the various departments, the rebuilt vessel, under the name of the Candler Floating School, will set sail on September 15 on her initial voyage. She will complete her combined school term and voyage June 10, 1924.

Mr. Candler said the school is not a philanthropic foundation. It is a purely business proposition and only men of means can afford to send their sons through such a course.

"My son," Mr. Candler said, "and the son of my brother, Howard, will go on the first cruise. This expresses my confidence in the scheme."

"The view I take is this," Mr. Candler continued, "There are many poor boys who attend schools and buckle down to their work in earnest because they have no other interests, but there are many sons of rich men who have their cars and their clubs and find too much to do other than to study. If the rich man's sons are sent to my school they will enjoy themselves, but at the same time they will see that they must concentrate on their studies."

Young boys will not be accepted by the school, Mr. Candler said. Those who are admitted must have reached the third year of high school or the first or second year of a liberal arts college. Each boy must have a certificate of health and be of good morals.

Logan will be surveyed today and turned over to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation for reconstruction.

LaGrange, Ga., February 20.—(Special).—In addition to the reward of $250 offered by Governor Hardwick for the apprehension of the slayer of Philip Green, prominent Troup county planter who was found dead in front of his barn last Thursday morning, the Troup county board of commissioners have also offered a reward of $250. Philip Green was found Thursday morning lying in front of his barn with a gunshot wound in the back of his head which had evidently been fired at close range. Sixteen negroes are held in the Troup county jail in connection with the killing but the officers have been unable to connect sufficient evidence to indicate the perpetrator of the crime.

Zion City Priest Is Found Guilty Of Criminal Libel

Faces Jail and Fine for Verbal Attack on Rev. Thomas Nelson.

Chicago, February 20.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, high priest of the Christian Apostolic church, and overseer of Zion City, was found guilty by a jury Tuesday night of criminally libeling the Rev. Thomas H. Nelson, pastor of Zion's Grace Missionary church.

Voliva, who is the successor to John Alexander Dowie as leader of the Zion cult, now faces a year's imprisonment and a fine of $500, the maximum penalty for the offense, and the penalty recommended by the jury. Judge Hopkins will pass sentence on Voliva March 10.

Harry A. Berger, Voliva's attorney, at once filed a plea for a new trial.

"I'll fight this case through to the United States supreme court if I have to," declared Voliva, following the verdict.

The jury, which was out one hour and 40 minutes, has awarded a signal victory for the "independents" worshippers of Zion, who have alleged religious, civil and political persecution at the hands of Voliva and his followers, who vastly outnumber them.

Much Religious Strife
The Rev. Nelson charged that Voliva had called him an "old goat," "tom cat," "wild man of Borneo," "blatherskite," and even far less polite names, merely because he had broken away from the Christian Apostolic faith and taken some of Voliva's followers away from him.

Since the Rev. Nelson's apostasy there has been religious strife featured by a war of billboards, in which Voliva erected signs denouncing the independents and the independents in turn defaced the signs with "paint bombs," by assaults and arrests, and by various court actions. At one time Nelson and several of his followers had their sewer connections cut off by the city authorities on orders from Voliva.

Voliva and his attorneys, by the aid of a score of witnesses, attempted to prove that the epithets the prophet had applied to the Rev. Nelson were all quite appropriate. Witnesses testified both against the Rev. Nelson's reputation for veracity and his moral character, claiming that he had been guilty of various improprieties with women.

Lawyer Not Complimentary.
State's Attorney A. V. Smith, of Lake county, in addressing the jury described Voliva variously as "a demagogue," "a Caesar," "a little czar," and "a devil fish which spits out ink."

The case was brought here from Lake county on a chance of venue after a jury at Waukegan had found Voliva guilty in a previous trial only to have Judge Claire C. Edwards set aside its verdict.

Now, it is understood, Voliva will face libel suits in civil courts through which the Rev. Nelson seeks to collect heavy monetary damages. If the Rev. Nelson comes out financially ahead he has promised the Grace Missionary church may expect a new carper and possibly a real pipe organ.

Voliva and his religious colony are best known for their extreme antipathy toward the fads and fetiches of the rest of the world. Cigarettes, short skirts, half-length sleeves on women's attire, silk stockings and mixed bathing are all under the ban in Zion and violations of ordinances against these things invariably lead to the Zion jail and severe penalties from Zion judges.

METHODS DISCUSSED BY STATE CLOTHIERS

Ewing Addresses Convention of Requisites for Business Success.

Principal requisites for success in merchandising were outlined for members of the Georgia Clothiers and Furnishers' association in annual convention Tuesday by Joseph Ewing of New York, a representative of the Philip-Jones corporation.

Clothing merchants from all parts of the state were present when the fourth annual convention of the association opened at the Ansley roof garden Tuesday morning. The morning session was devoted to a number of addresses on the various phases of the clothing business, general discussions of merchandising occupied the afternoon session and the delegates enjoyed a theater party Tuesday night.

J. L. Hunt, of Columbus, president of the association, presided at the convention sessions. Mr. Hunt introduced Mayor Walter A. Sims, who welcomed the visitors to Atlanta. President Hunt responded to the address of welcome and introduced Mr. Ewing.

Ability to study the customer and his wants and to thoroughly understand fundamentals of various lines handled, Mr. Ewing declared, were the principal requisites for success in merchandising. Methods of merchandising in England were cited by the speaker in support of the plea for a more thorough study of the customer. The fact that American merchants do not train their sales-people thoroughly so that they may give maximum service to the customers, Mr. Ewing declared, was one of the greatest drawbacks to business.

Aaron Cohen, of Athens, spoke on "Market Conditions." Howard Muse, of Atlanta, delivered an address on "The Proper Mark-up on Merchandise," and Joseph V. Freitag, of Atlanta, advertising manager of Norris, Inc., spoke on "Better Advertising."

BUCHER DEFENDS ITALY'S POSITION IN WORLD'S WAR
Colonel M. C. Buckley defended Italy's position in the world war in an address at the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Atlanta section of the Association of the Army of the United States, held in the breakfast room of the Kimball house Tuesday evening. Major General David C. Shanks, commanding general fourth corps area, Fort McPherson, Georgia, was a guest of honor.

Senators Harris and George and Congressman Upshaw and Mayor Sims were elected to honorary membership in the association. Colonel Buckley, who has recently returned from Europe where he was stationed as military attaché at Rome, justified Italy's membership in the triple alliance for defensive purposes and said it was only when the central powers began aggressive warfare that she deserted them.

The next meeting will be held March 6 at 8:30 p. m. in the breakfast room of the Kimball house, at which time Dean Johnston will speak on his observations in Europe since the war. All regular, national guard and reserve officers are eligible for membership.

Negro Odd Fellows' Injunction Dissolved By Supreme Court
Dissolution Tuesday by the supreme court of Georgia of an injunction granted in the Fulton county superior court, has apparently settled the Negro Odd Fellows' case that has occupied a prominent place on court calendars for some time.

The injunction was the result of ouster proceedings aimed at B. J. Davis, A. D. Jones and B. S. Ingram by the committee of management, representing national headquarters of the organization. They were officers of grand lodge No. 18, United Order of Odd Fellows of Georgia, at the time, and continued to look after administration of affairs after the injunction was granted.

E. L. Collier, A. Graves and Dr. C. W. Owens, colored, were among those fighting the injunction. They had been named as officers of the grand lodge when the other faction came back with the order that prevented Collier and his associates from taking office.

The Georgia lodge is one of the wealthiest in the country, owning valuable property in Atlanta and other sections of the state. Brandon & Hines, Rosser, Slaton & Hopkins, Branch, Howard and C. T. Gore represented Davis et al., while Walter T. Colquitt, Dan Conyers and C. L. Pettigrew were counsel for Collier's faction.

HEAVY LIQUOR FINES
Judge Grubb Deals Harshly in Convictions.
Heavy fines for violation of the prohibition law featured the session of United States district court Tuesday. P. L. House, Forsyth county, convicted of possessing whisky, was fined $350 by Judge W. I. Grubb, and John Stanich, also of Forsyth, found guilty on a similar charge, drew a fine of $250, getting off lighter than House in the federal court because he had already paid a fine of $250 in state courts for the same offense.

Walter Collet, of Dawson county, was the only defendant charged with making whisky who was not released. Collet had two cases against him, and drew a sentence of 60 days in each. Will Greenaway, Dawson, was acquitted of a charge of making whisky.

SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS CLARKE

Upholds Judge Bell's Action in Throwing Out "Insurgent" Petition for Receiver for Klan.

The supreme court of Georgia, in a decision rendered Tuesday, upheld the lower court in its action in throwing out the petition of Harry B. Terrell and his insurgent faction of the Ku Klux Klan, for a receivership for that organization.

Judge George L. Bell, of Fulton county, had originally thrown out the Terrell petition on a general demurrer presented by attorneys for the Klan, for E. Y. Clarke and for Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler. The supreme court yesterday upheld this ruling.

The petition contained five prayers, all of which were thrown out by the supreme court.

The first prayed that the Klan be enjoined from banishing the petitioners. The court held that they had not been banished and had not been tried, therefore no case was presented to the court.

Secondly, they asked the appointment of a receiver, claiming that finanacial affairs of the order were being mismanaged and that Mr. Clarke and Mrs. Tyler were receiving too high compensation for their services. On this point the court said: "The facts do not authorize the appointment of a receiver. The petitioners have no financial interest in the property of the Klan. The money they and other members paid was a donation."

The third prayer asked an order to compel Mr. Clarke to cancel an alleged claim of indebtedness by the Klan to him. The court held that such a question could not properly come before a court of equity.

The fourth and fifth prayers asked that Mr. Clarke and Mrs. Tyler be enjoined from further official connection with the Klan or control over its affairs. On these points the court held that "a court of equity would not adopt these radical measures in advance of some action by the order itself, in view of the fact that the order has ample machinery to prefer charges and try those charges against any of its members."

Names attached to the petition included Harry B. Terrell, Lloyd P. Hooper, A. J. Padon and 170 others. They were represented by Attorney William H. Terrell, an uncle of Harry B. Terrell, while the Klan was represented by Attorney Ben H. Sullivan, Westmoreland & Smith and Ethridge, Sams & Ethridge.

WEEVIL CONFERENCE WILL HEAR L. D. HILL

Discoverer of Boll Weevil
Poison Describes Efforts to Develop It.

Among the prominent visitors in attendance upon the boll weevil conference now in session at the Baptist tabernacle, is L. D. Hill, Burke county cotton planter, and creator of Hill's mixture, a preparation that has been used effectively in the fight against the "billion dollar pest." Mr. Hill will address the conference today.

A "son of the soil," Mr. Hill has created Hill's mixture out of his experience with the boll weevil. In common with his neighbors, the influx of this Mexican pest destroyed his cotton crop for several years until, through study and investigation, he compounded the mixture which has been so effectively used, not only by himself, but his neighbors, in their fight against the boll weevil.

Tells of Discovery.

In speaking of how he came to create the mixture which bears his name, Mr. Hill said:

"In common with thousands of others throughout the country, I began to study the Mexican boll weevil, to see what could be done to grow cotton in spite of him. I began to study the boll weevil and its habits. I did this night and day, using a shell box to sit on in the field in the daytime, and I would use the lights of my automobile to light the field at night. I stayed in the cotton field so much that some of my neighbors and friends began to think that I had lost my mind, and would soon be a member at the sanitarium at Milledgeville, Ga.

"And when I began to poison the weevil they were sure that I had gone crazy and would soon be in the insane asylum. They did not know that I had fallen heir to my father's library, the best in the state for his time, and that when I was a young fellow I had read medicine under him for a year. So with these books and the information I had gathered, I worked out a plan to poison the weevil with a liquid mixture. I had found out his habits and his food and the only thing left for me to do was to get something that he would take to as readily as he did his natural food.

"Betting All I Had."

"Now this was some job for a cracker farmer living in a little place like Gough, Ga., but I was betting all I had that I could beat him, and I was determined to play the game to the end.

"After time, effort and expense, I discovered a combination of elements that would make the boll weevil leave the best meal of cotton he ever had, and eat my poison. This is what I am offering to the farmers of the cotton belt today as Hill's mixture. When it is used according to my instructions it will give your cotton 100 per cent protection."

Incomes on which these returns were filed amounted in one instance to $2,500.50, with personal exemptions of $2,500, leaving a taxable surplus of 50 cents, which netted the government 2 cents. This tax was paid in cash, the payee not requesting privilege of four equal installments.

The other papers filed showed a total income of $2,502, with personal exemptions of $2,500. This netted the government 8 cents, and it was paid in postage stamps, also on a spot cash basis.

Very often a pimple, blackhead or irritation of the skin is simply nature's way of warning you that you are careless, and it is reminding you that you must take care of your skin, clean it of the dust and grease which collect in the pores, so they can throw off impurities from the system, which otherwise collect, and then faster, causing blackheads, pimples and other face blemishes.

from the main office and factories at Toledo by L. G. Peed, general sales manager of that company. Fred S. Patterson, Atlanta branch manager, issued a call to his dealers and they responded to a man to attend the Southern Automobile show and their own sales conference.

Mr. Peed arrived in Atlanta Tuesday morning and made a whirlwind campaign of his short stay here. He was at the branch bright and early meeting the various dealers and discussing sales policies with them. At noon a luncheon was served and then Mr. Peed put across the vital message that he had brought from Toledo.

The Willys-Overland dealer convention is the third big dealers' meeting to be held in Atlanta since the Southern Automobile show opened on Saturday. Chevrolet had their session on Saturday and Buick held a meeting on Monday.

Durant and Star dealers from this territory will have their filing today. A luncheon will be served at the Ansley hotel after which a meeting will be held. The principal speakers will be M. R. Tenby, general sales manager, and J. H. Newmark, sales promotion manager.

By the way, the Durant line now consists of the Durant, Star, Flint, Locomobile and Mason Road King speed truck.

H. H. Rice, president of the Cadillac Motor Car company, will arrive in Atlanta Thursday night for a dealers' meeting on Friday, according to an announcement made by R. A. Parker, of the Cadillac company, of Atlanta, yesterday.

C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motor company, is scheduled to be in Atlanta Thursday for a Nash dealers' meeting.

More factory men arrived yesterday. F. S. Carter, special representative of the Hudson Motor Car company, was a visitor at the J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.-Grant company, and the Porter-Minehan company, Hudson and Essex distributor and dealer, respectively.

R. V. Allen, southern district manager for the Peerless Motor Car company, arrived for the show and is visiting with the Lifsey-Chambers company.

R. B. Jackson, western sales manager for Rolls-Royce, is also here for the show. G. D. Spinks, sales engineer for Gardner, answered "present" to the roll-call that makes three factory men here with Lifsey-Chambers company. They get the laurel wreath so far.

The Oldsmobile four-cylinder cab is a new model that made its appearance in the Olds Motor Works exhibit yesterday.

W. A. Ryan, manager of sales of the Ford Motor company, and E. J. Hobart, manager of services of the same company, ran down from Detroit to present the factory message to the Atlanta branch yesterday. W. W. Mitchell, local branch manager, and all of his organization were present for the conference yesterday morning.

W. H. Kinnear, district representative for the Velle Motors corporation, is manning his exhibit alone. He has been expecting aid from the factory but it hasn't shown up. As a result, he is quite hoarse from talking about his motor exhibit.

If you should enter the main auditorium and hear someone talking in an emphatic way about his product it is Otis Lucas and his subject is Lincoln.

Frank North, fresh from a siege in a hospital, is telling "em all he knows about the Nash and Lafayette display. And he knows something about those two lines, too.

A. G. Millard, branch manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, is expecting some factory men down here today or tomorrow.

F. R. Pendleton, manager of long distance demonstrations of the Franklin Motor company, was a show visitor and guest of the Franklin Motor Car company yesterday.

Frank Beall, sales manager, states that several high factory officials are expected to arrive later in the week.

The booth of the Southern Auto and Equipment company is one of the most popular in the accessory division. A number of items which the company sells and renders official service for in the southeast are being shown.

The big booth of Lon Credelle is a veritable accessory show within itself. Many of the articles of equipment necessary for the correctly groomed car are shown to good advantage.

The Amalie Oil display of the Franklin Motor company, the necessary division, is one of the most interesting "live" exhibits. In it is shown a transmission and universal joint in action, using Amalie lubricants.

INTEREST MOUNTS IN
SOUTH'S GREAT SHOW

Chicago, New York, nor Detroit shows, could compare with this one in decorative beauty.

"It is the most beautifully decorated show I have ever attended," he said, "and is far superior in many respects to the show in New York, Detroit and Chicago this year."

"When you look through the opening into the main hall and see the innumerable peachtrees in full bloom of spring and listen to the notes of the songbirds, one cannot help but be impressed with the incomparable beauty of the show."

A large number of sales were reported by various dealers Tuesday evening, many of them declaring that the benefits of the show in this respect exceeds their highest expectations. In the throng Tuesday evening were many out-of-town visitors, who were looking over the cars with an unusual amount of interest, and several dealers report a number of sales to these visitors.

Number of Orders Placed.

Knowing that all well-known makes of cars were exhibited at the show, and that factory experts were present to explain in detail every advantage of the car they represented, a large number of visitors from other sections of the state came to Atlanta for the express purpose of selecting and purchasing a car.

There seemed to be an even distribution of prospective buyers Tuesday as all salesmen were busy during the whole afternoon and evening explaining the merits of their cars, while many would-be customers occupied inviting chairs and awaited their turn.

An unusually large number of models never shown in Atlanta before are displayed at the show this year, many of them being the latest product of the factory, and was shipped to Atlanta in order that the public may see the latest styles and designs that are being built.

A dealers' conference and luncheon by the salesmen and managers, representatives of the Durant Motor company will be held today at 1 o'clock at the Ansley hotel. Approximately 200 representatives of the company from all parts of the south will attend. Addresses will be made on salesmanship and the merits of the Durant cars at the meeting by prominent factory officials.

Business Flourishing.

Automobile supply dealers whose wares are displayed along the passageway beneath the mezzanine floor, announce that business is flourishing. The booths with all of their gay decorations have the appearance of a carnival, but the barkers are absent. These salesmen enumerate the virtues of their particular contrivance in a smooth and convincing manner, that is usually accompanied by a demonstration of the apparatus, they wish to sell.

Atlanta Products Displayed.

Among the Atlanta products displayed is the well-known Lovell Freewheel lock, for Fords and Chevrolets, and is recognized by the insurance companies as being a standard lock. Another automobile steering lock manufactured by the Automotive Lock company, of Atlanta, is exhibited. This lock has also received recognition from all automobile insurance companies.

Hanson Called Beautiful.

Splendid success, both as to sale and prospects, is reported by W. C. Grimes, salesman for the Hanson Motor company, who says he is delighted with the favorable comment by the visitors. The Hanson Big Six is an object of special interest at the show, and is said by many to be one of the most beautiful of all light cars exhibited.

Bank Sends Flowers.

Several of the dealers and auto supply men were presented with baskets of flowers by the Citizens and Southern bank, with the word "Congratulations" written on an attached card.

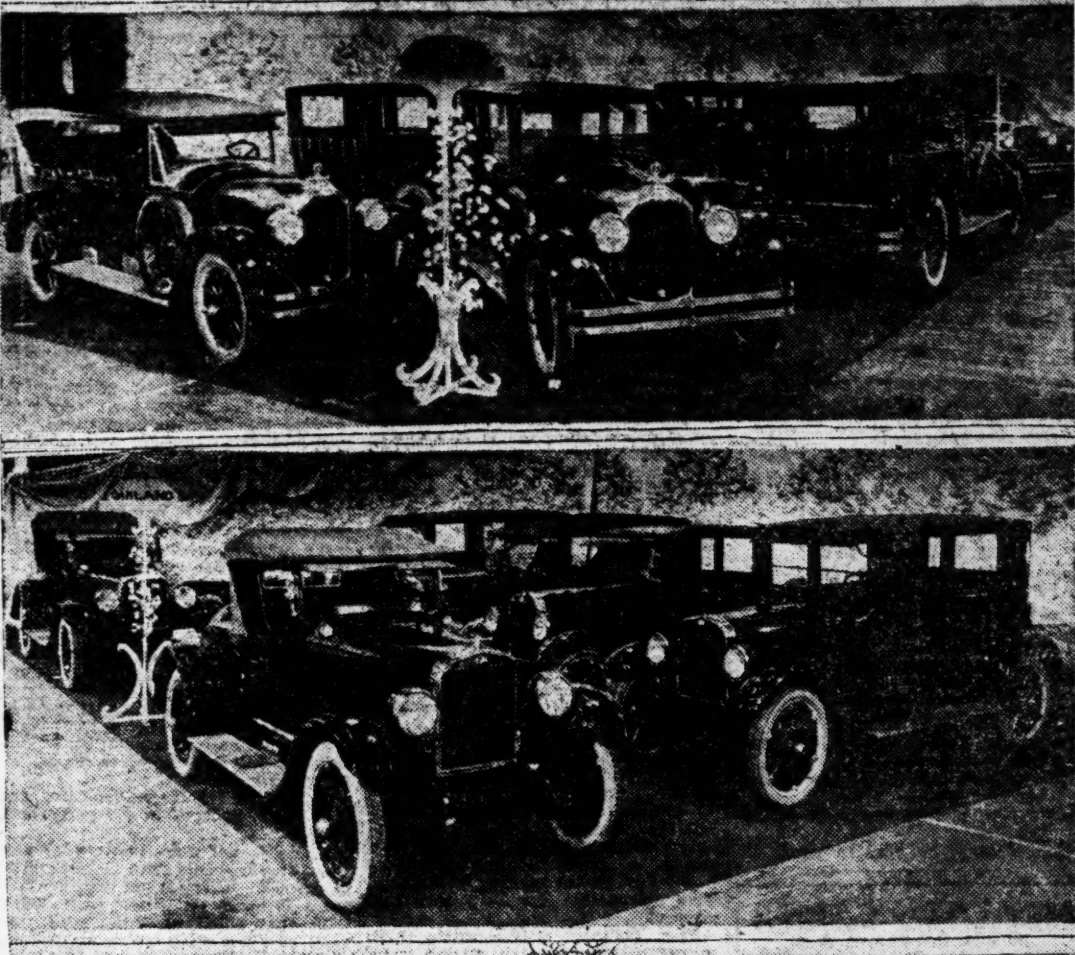

Buyers View Cadillac.

Five beautiful models are displayed by the Cadillac in Taft hall, which are usually surrounded by a number of prospective buyers. Jack Foster, who has charge of the exhibit, declares that the show has been a pronounced success for his company, and expects to sell more Cadillacs this year than at any previous show.

Mr. Thompson is one of the most prominent automobile dealers in the south, being president of the Marmon Atlanta company, of Atlanta, and owning a large interest in the Newkirk Motor company, of Jacksonville.

Beckstrom Delighted.

C. E. Beckstrom, division manager of the Kissel Motor company, is attending the show and states that the show is a pronounced success from every angle. The Kissel speedster placed foremost of all Kissel cars on the stage, is an object of admiration for all who pass by.

Freed From Pen When Another Man Confesses

Innocent Party Serves Five Months for Murder of Special Officer in Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio, February 20.—Clarence Leroy McKinney, known as 51,210 behind the gray walls of the Ohio penitentiary, dropped his tools in the looming mill today and hurried to Warden Thomas' office in answer to an imperative summons.

He found a reporter with the warden.

"You're free," he was told, "the other fellow pleaded guilty."

McKinney's face twitched slightly and he said without emotion: "Oh, am I?"

This was ended a case which officials said has been almost without parallel in the criminal history of Ohio.

Five months ago, McKinney, whose wife lives in Cincinnati, started to serve a life sentence for murder.

A jury at Wilmington, Ohio, found him guilty of shooting to death

Special Officer Emory McCreight, February 14, 1922.

McKinney asserted from the start that he was in a picture show in Cincinnati with his wife at the time McCreight was killed.

The case apparently was closed with the sending to prison of 29-year-old McKinney. Then a few months later, Louis Vandervoort, of Jamestown, son of a wealthy farmer, was arrested on suspicion he was responsible for many burglaries.

Today in Wilmington he pleaded guilty to a charge of murder in the second degree and admitted he killed McCreight. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. His accomplice, Walter Bingham, of Jamestown, admitting manslaughter, received a one to twenty-year term in the Mansfield reformatory.

"McKinney," said Warden Thomas, "is the most philosophical man I have seen in my nineteen years here."

"Sure," said McKinney, "we all have our troubles; I knew this would come out all right."

Warden Thomas said he would not release McKinney until necessary papers had been forwarded from Wilmington authorities.

PLANS VOTE ON FARM MEASURE SATURDAY

Believe Banking Committee Will Report Out New Bill This Week.

Washington, February 20.—A comprehensive agricultural credits program, based on the Capper bill passed by the Senate, will be reported by the banking committee probably on Thursday and taken up for passage in the House Saturday, under plans disclosed today by Republican leaders.

Final drafting of the measure was begun today in the committee. Meanwhile Representative Dowell, Republican, Iowa, presiding at the conference, explained that it lacked the required number of signatures and stated in any event he would not issue a call for tomorrow for there was not sufficient time to notify all members.

Representative Dowell announced later that he had obtained the required number of signatures and would present the petition again to Mr. Towner with a request for a conference Friday night if the credits legislation had not been reported by that time. He declared the farm bloc members would insist on a bill embodying the salient features of both the Capper bill and the Lenroot-Anderson measure, also passed by the Senate.

Meantime the House today passed and sent to the Senate another farm aid measure. It was the strong bill liberalizing the federal farm loan system, increasing from $10,000 to $10,000 the maximum of loans to individual borrowers, with an additional provision for loans up to $25,000 in exceptional cases and subject to the approval of the federal farm loan board.

Secretary Mellon presented his views on the two measures in a letter sent today to Chairman McFadden of the banking committee. He indicated the Capper bill, which would authorize the formation under federal charter of agricultural credit corporations to make agricultural paper eligible for rediscount at federal reserve banks. Agricultural paper would be defined as obligations of co-operative marketing associations.

The treasury secretary declared the financial provisions of the Lenroot-Anderson bill to be "dangerous" on the whole and its administrative provisions to be unworkable, but recommended that certain of its features be incorporated in the Capper bill. These included authority for the rediscount corporations to make loans direct to co-operative marketing associations on warehouse receipt security and the making of paper factors, based on agricultural products in their raw state, eligible for rediscount at federal reserve banks. Mr. Mellon also indicated the provision for repeal of the amendment to the federal reserve act authorizing progressive rediscount rates.

Says Bill Faulty. The Lenroot-Anderson bill, the secretary said, was faulty in its larger outlines of policy. He added that the farmer had "suffered in the past from unsound banking systems."

Mr. Mellon said that, contrary to current reports, the joint agricultural commission never had endorsed the Lenroot-Anderson bill in its present form, which he asserted, "differed radically from the bill which the commission endorsed."

"The greatest service to agriculture would be by enacting the Capper bill," the letter continued. "And withholding action on the Lenroot bill until the situation can be more thoroughly investigated. The Capper bill will go far toward satisfying the needs of those sections of the country which have suffered in the past from inadequate credit facilities. At the same time it is financially sound and avoids excessive centralization which constitutes a serious defect in the Lenroot bill."

Another desirable feature of the Capper bill, Mr. Mellon said, was the time during which the war finance corporations could make loans for agricultural purposes, "thus bringing us nearer than any unforeseen credit needs will be amply supplied during the crop season."

Until further results of investigations are available, the secretary said, the Capper bill, "these amendments suggested, should constitute a complete and adequate program of agricultural credits legislation."

EDUCATION BOARDS IMMUNE TO SUITS

A county board of education is not a body which can sue or be sued, the court of appeals ruled Tuesday, and therefore a judgment obtained against such a board is of no effect. This decision was rendered in the case brought by J. M. Hunt against the Houston county board of education, on a claim for hauling children to school in a motor bus.

British Editor See Need of U. S. Help for Europe

Shows Good Effects Recent Debt Agreement Will Have on International Affairs.

BY JOHN ST. LOE STRACHEY. Editor of The London Spectator. (Copyright, 1923, by United News.) London, February 20.—Courage and honor, wisdom and foresight. These are the qualities that best become statesmen in the handling of public affairs.

Unless at critical moments men can brace themselves to look facts in the face and to decide not on small issues but on large, and are willing to run risks and take responsibilities, they cannot attain to worthy ends. When they have set their minds in order and the time to act has come, they will act swiftly, generously, and above all, bravely.

That is how Mr. Bonar Law and his cabinet have acted in accepting the American terms for the funding of the British debt. The nation has reached a turning point in its history. By the cabinet's decision a world was affected.

The British people have to shoulder a terrible burden. We are certain that they will do so with grace and now that their trusted leader tells them that it is required by honor and good faith.

The terms held in the city of London by business people generally to be fair and reasonable, considering our promises and the fact that we shall be paying a lower rate of interest than that at which our own government borrows.

We may roughly sketch some of the consequences of this settlement.

If the world is to be made capable of recovery we must have the help and, above all, the confidence of America. We cannot obtain that more surely than by keeping our contracts and paying our debts, and paying them like gentlemen, not with groans and curses, but with a good grace.

The Americans are a business people and respect, above all, those who keep a contract even though it be to their own hurt. Now that we can stand by them as equals, for both of us are creditor nations and both have a duty to mankind, we can ask them to help us in restoring a real peace to a shattered Europe.

Our understanding with America will tremble, nay, quadruple, our influence on the continent. It will not only make it much easier to dissuade France to give up her mad scheme of ruining Germany in order to make her pay; it will also render it far simpler for France to change her policy without loss of "face."

America, as well as Britain, is deeply interested in the commercial recovery of Central Europe. America is, also like us, the creditor of France. To America and Britain, speaking in unison, France will surely listen, especially if we offer her, as we can, terms which will give her far more security and far better material guarantees than can ever be obtained by pouring her own treasure down the mines and the Ruhr and driving Germany into the arms of either the bolsheviks or the militarists. So much for the extra weight our words will now carry in Europe.

Of the advantages we shall gain for ourselves by a friendly, a just, and an advantageous settlement with America we say only that they are likely to prove of incalculable value. Trade, we predict with confidence, will rapidly adjust itself to our great annual payments to America. It will, we believe, be found that a golden ladder has been placed against the tariff wall. But be the paradoxes of finance what they will, we have obtained a great moral and material insurance by the settlement. America is going to say to herself: "John has acted like a gentleman, and we don't mean this to be the last transaction between us and him."

We have given every American of good intent a firm basis for showing his good feeling towards the mother of the race and have falsified the prophecies of every enemy of this country in the United States.

L. & N. RAILROAD PLACES EMBARGO ON 'DEAD FREIGHT'

Birmingham, Ala., February 20.—Owing to badly congested conditions in the Louisville yards, the gateway to Cincinnati and other points north of Louisville, the L. & N. railroad has declared an embargo and no "dead freight" of any kind is being received for Louisville and points beyond, according to L. & N. officials here.

The order went into effect Sunday morning, to be lifted when congestion at Louisville is relieved. This depends upon weather conditions further north, it is said. Only perishables and live stock shipments are being accepted. Pig iron shipments are shut off by this embargo, the first affecting this district since the car shortage last summer.

BELIEVE VALERA WILL BE JAILED BY FREE STATERS

Dublin, February 20.—Eamon de Valera, having refused the olive branch extended by the free state government, is now to be given a taste of the sword.

It is understood that de Valera, president of the eastwhile "Irish republic," who has been waging a campaign of relentless warfare against the constituted government of Erin, is to be ferreted out of his hiding place and imprisoned.

Free state officials, it is declared, know where the rebel chief is hiding, but have refrained from taking him into custody until the period of amnesty expired. This period is now at an end.

In the opinion of the government, the arrest of de Valera and Liam Lynch, his aide, would completely break the back of armed resistance to the free state.

Insurgents, however, openly boast the free state does not dare take their leader.

In a letter from Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania, Governor Hardwick was on Tuesday asked to appoint delegates to a nation-wide road conference to be held in Harrisburg, Pa., on March 23 and 24. It was stated in the letter that it is planned at this gathering to launch a program for better road construction and traffic regulation of nationwide scope, without regard to state boundaries.

West End Citizen Out With Facts In His Case

In Remarkable Statement to Public, J. H. Walden Gives Unqualified Endorsement to Tanlac. Feels It Has Added Years to His Life.

"All the money in the land couldn't buy the good Tanlac has done me, for I simply feel like years have been added to my life," is the high tribute paid the merits of the medicine, the other day, by J. H. Walden, a Civil War veteran and business man of the pioneer days, residing at 42 Dunn street, Atlanta, Ga.

"An attack of the 'flu' last fall let me in such a bad fix that life was miserable and work a burden. After being confined to my bed for three weeks I scarcely had strength to stand on my feet or go up and down the front steps. Sleep was a rare thing for me and I would roll and toss all night. I lost weight until my clothes were away too large and I felt very much discouraged."

Where Has My Money Gone?

Ever ask yourself that question? How much have you to show for your work of last year? Startles you, doesn't it?

Remember this—someone has the money you earned last year—probably in a bank earning interest.

Are you going to drift year after year, seeing others more far-sighted become independent while you are still dependent upon your weekly wage or salary?

It makes no difference whether you earn $25 or $1,000 per week—if you don't SAVE a fair proportion of it, you are not a success, but a drifter.

Quit it right now. Start today to save. A dollar will do—bring it to Atlanta's oldest Savings Bank—the safe, alert, progressive bank that has helped people save for more than twenty-two years.

What Women Lose By Dingy Teeth

—Why do it?

Dingy teeth rob women of a major charm. Not beauty only, but that added grace which lies in the open smile.

Millions of women have found a way to whiter teeth, also to better protection. You meet them everywhere today—with teeth you envy, maybe.

Will you not learn how they get them—by this delightful test?

Due to film That viscous film you feel on teeth is what clouds them. And it often wrecks them. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to that unsightly film.

Watch it act Use Pepsodent for ten days. See for yourself what it does. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Then decide by what you see and feel. Judge what is best for you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

Ways to end it Tooth troubles were increasing until very few escaped. So dental science sought for ways to fight that film. In time two ways were found. One acts to curdle film, one

For More Equipment and Better Service

The railroads of America have contracted to spend the enormous sum of nearly one billion dollars for the improvement of their service, by the addition of equipment and the betterment of road conditions, during the year of 1923. This huge investment is being made in order that the business of the nation may prosper and develop, and represents careful study on the part of railroad executives who are entrusted with the investment of more funds than any other single business institution in all America.

New cars (both freight and passenger), new motive power (new and heavier types of engines), and improved track conditions will make for better service by all the railroads.

The L. & N. Railroad Has Lately Authorized or Expended Nearly $30,000,000 for such work,—which figures represent an appropriation of $5,952.00 per mile; whereas, the average investment, per mile, of all American railroads is but $2,729.00.

Furthermore, the L. & N. is also contemplating the inauguration of additional work involving many more millions of dollars which will be authorized and consummated as the year 1923 progresses.

Although there is "water everywhere," the railroads in the United States spend per year more than $23,000,000 for the purpose of providing a satisfactory water supply for efficient operation of locomotives.

will go on without interruption in any way.

To new members, announcement of the special extra auto prizes is proving especially interesting. Dotted all over Georgia and the south are hundreds of towns and counties totally without representation in the campaign. These are absolutely untouched so far as securing subscriptions to The Constitution, the "Standard Southern Newspaper," is concerned.

Scarcely a man or woman in this "virgin territory" has been approached on this matter, and a new and fresh club member can enter this untouched territory and easily reap a harvest of subscriptions.

Have Advantage.

"Club members who enter from this 'virgin territory' have all the advantage in this special award campaign," the Help-Yourself management pointed out Tuesday. "If they are active and ambitious, everything is in their favor. The important thing is early entries. Ownership of the two beautiful special added prizes will be determined in a period of exactly 19 days—no more and no less. This means that time is limited, so people who plan to win these prizes should not lose a single hour in rushing in their entry blanks and getting busy."

"The announcements of the Help-Yourself Club have never been varied one single iota, and they never will be. Nineteen days will determine who wins these two special extra automobiles, so if you plan to win one, don't repeat the mistake of waiting and delaying. Every day counts and counts heavily. Clip out your entry blank now and mail it in. The rest is up to you."

Regular club members at the same time were urged by club officials to maintain the splendid standard they have set so far during the campaign.

which is just hitting its proper stride and has its six biggest and best weeks before its closing on March 31.

Same Judges In Charge.

"Don't let new club members take the new added prizes," was the warning issued Tuesday. "It is now possible for one club member to win two beautiful automobiles—one of the two special automobile prizes and one of the original list of sixteen cars. Plenty of people have won two cars, and you can do it, too, if you just make up your mind to do so."

Judges who will supervise awarding of the forty original prizes will have general charge of awarding of the two special auto prizes. The judges, who are five prominent officials of as many big Atlanta department stores are: J. P. Allen, president of J. P. Allen & Co., Beaumont Davidson, president of Davidson-Paxon-Stokes company; W. H. Brittain, president of the J. M. High company; Lucian York, general manager of M. Rich & Bros. company, and Henry S. Bahnsen Charges Sheriff Protects Officer's Slayer

Letter to Hardwick Alleges Official Aid to Tick Law Violators.

Dr. P. H. Bahnsen, state veterinarian, in a letter to Governor Hardwick made public Tuesday, directly charges that the killing of Federal Inspector Lochridge, and the wounding of Federal Inspector Richie, while they were pursuing their duties in the directing of the cattle tick war in Echols county, was done by H. J. Carter, otherwise known as "Mann" Carter, and his son, Will Carter.

Dr. Bahnsen also charges that Sheriff Pennington, of Echols county, has refused to arrest the Carters and that the sheriff and county solicitor are "sympathizers of Carter and if they act at all, it will be in the defense of the Carters."

J. H. Jeffares, a state inspector in Grady county, has written Dr. Bahnsen, stating that he has been arrested and carried to "Florida on a cattle stealing charge, because he seized some Florida cattle which had crossed the state line while infected with ticks."

Governor Hardwick had honored the requisition for Jeffares, without knowing that he is a tick inspector, and with no knowledge of the circumstances in the case.

This matter was also called to the governor's attention by Dr. Bahnsen, and his letter concluded with the statement that warrants have been issued for the arrest of Mann Carter and his son, but that they have not been arrested and he believes they are in hiding in Echols county.

Forces of Sin Making Heavy Inroads, Says Pastor at Convention

Jacksonville, Fla., February 20.—Taking as his theme "The Challenge To an Advancing Host," Dr. Clay Lilley, of Lexington, Ky., declared the forces of sin and evil are making inroads into the courts, civic life, church, school and home in a talk today at the opening session of the Eighth Biennial Convention of the Presbyterian Laymen's Forward movement.

Leading members of the Presbyterian clergy and laity from Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida are in attendance at the meeting, which will continue through tomorrow.

Many of the nation's strongholds, said Dr. Lilley, are seriously threatened and paganism and "civilized respectability," which he defined as another phase of agnosticism, are gaining a foothold that is both dangerous and deadly.

Dr. J. Campbell White, of New York, was on tonight's program. His subject was "Jesus Christ, the Only Hope of the World."

Captain Frederick Sullens, Jackson, Miss., newspaper editor, will speak tomorrow morning. He is scheduled for a "testimonial talk" on religion.

Squeezes Water Out of Automobile Prices

$1885 $1885

F. O. B. FACTORY PLUS WAR TAX

The Plan That Makes This Price Possible

For years the outstanding evil of the motor car industry has been the "trade-in" practice.

To be able to offer what appear to be good prices for old cars taken in trade, it has been necessary to list prices high enough to take care of the old cars "traded in."

Frankly, it has been necessary to "water" the prices of the new cars.

The result—you have an old car for which you paid $2,000—the dealer allows you $1,000, or perhaps more. You think you get $1,000—but do you? To make this offer possible a high price is set, with big discount to dealers. After all—at actual valuation aren't you getting only $200 or $300 for your old car? The Cole Motor Car Company dealers have decided to lay their cards on the table face up—to lay bare the inside truths of merchandising motor cars—and, what is more important, discontinue the "trade-in" policy.

This means that we are literally saving the biggest cost of doing business—no more heat, light, rent, sales cost, interest and depreciation to be charged to used cars—the saving is passed on to the public, where it belongs.

That is the plan in tune with modern economic conditions, which makes it possible to offer the Cole at $1,885—nearly one-half of the price of a year ago in Atlanta, and from $1,000 to $1,500 under any car of similar power, finish and quality.

The Cole Aero-Eight will be on display at Space 4, at the Auditorium, during Show Week.

Do you often talk about your battery?

A man with a battery like the Exide, that does its duty ungrudgingly, does not say much about it. He does not think about it—it is off his mind. Exide owners accept better battery performance as a matter of course.

It is the person whose car will not start as required, or whose lights are uncertain, that talks about his battery. This sort of thing goes a long way toward taking the satisfaction out of motoring.

And why put up with it?

You can get an Exide Battery the right size for your car at a nearby Exide Service Station. This short trip there will end your battery worries. The Exide has the rugged power you can always depend on. It lasts so much longer than other batteries that it pays from a dollars-and-cents standpoint.

SHIP SUBSIDY BILL AT MERCY OF FILIBUSTER

of ten hours and forty-five minutes, and continuously for six hours and forty minutes.

Watch for Opening.

Proponents of the shipping legislation, powerless to stop the flow of words, conferred from time to time but the conferences for the most part came to naught and they bided the time when those waging the filibuster might become exhausted or some opening develop for the use of strategy.

Slight hope for exhausting the filibusters appeared, however, as they formulated their plans for carrying on their long promised fight. These plans, they said, contemplated lengthy speeches by a dozen or more senators and the estimate was made that sufficient strength was at hand to carry on the fight through speeches alone until the end of the week, even if the senate remained in continuous session.

Plan Various Speeches.

The speeches listed to be made in blocking the ship bill were varied. Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, was prepared to read the eleven hours' address made in 1915 by Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, a supporter of the pending bill, in the famous filibuster that killed the Wilson administration's bill to authorize a government-capitalized corporation to buy, build and operate ships in foreign trade, and said he proposed to interpret the reading with "frequent intermissions of my own." Others planned addresses varied from the discovery of King Tutankhamen's tomb to the history and principles of cooperative marketing.

The necessity of other opponents getting into the battle, however, was deferred hour after hour as Senator Sheppard proceeded in one of the most remarkable demonstrations in the history of the senate.

Opened Monday Night.

Senator Sheppard opened the active filibuster last night, began to speak at 6:27 o'clock and stopping only when a recess of the senate was taken at 10:10 o'clock. Although he suffered an attack of gripe early this month, he appeared fresh when the senate met today at 11 o'clock and immediately a quorum was obtained resumed his speech, consisting of a digest of the record of all activities of the league of nations, probably the most complete history of the league that has been compiled. Most of the address had been written in long hand and consisted of a stack of papers nearly a foot high.

Senator Sheppard spoke slowly and in a moderate tone, never moving more than two or three feet from his desk. He waved away pages who offered him a glass of water, and refused offers of his associates to make a point of no quorum, thereby allowing him a respite. He sat down for a minute or two several times during the day when, by unanimous consent, conference report and several minor bills were taken up and passed without debate.

Is Congratulated.

The Texas senator on concluding his speech was congratulated by Senator Fred Follette, republican, Wisconsin, the leader in many historic filibusters, and a number of other senators. After a quorum call Senator Williams, democrat, Mississippi, who retires from the senate next month after twelve years of service in the body, took the floor.

Throughout Senator Sheppard's long address the republican side of the chamber was for the most part deserted. The galleries were only partially filled.

While the speaking was in progress suggestions were heard on both sides of the chamber that it might be possible to reach an agreement to vote late in the week on the two more important amendments to the ship bill, the Madden amendment making government aid to ship operators contingent on annual appropriations by congress, and the McNary proposal that government aid payments be limited to the construction of ships.

Supporters of the bill are opposed to both, and it was intimated by some of the measure's champions that in event of adoption of the Madden amendment the administration would abandon the legislation. No definite agreements, however, were entered into with respect to a vote on the amendments, those in charge of the bill deciding to wait several days in the hope of wearing out those conducting the filibuster.

Cite Other Filibusters.

The extended speech made by Senator Sheppard and the promise of other long ones called to the minds of older senators the famous filibusters waged in the senate in the past. The available records show that the longest continuous senate session occurred in 1915 on the ship bill then pending. The senate at that time stayed in session fifty-four hours, and the sitting was marked by the eleven-hour address by Senator Smoot, an address of fourteen hours by Senator Jones, republican, Washington, who as chairman of the commerce committee is conducting the fight for the present ship bill, and a single speech of more than seven hours by Senator Gallinger, republican, New Hampshire, then 62 years of age. Senator Burton, of Ohio, now a member of the house, in 1914 conducted successfully a filibuster against the rivers and harbors bill, occupying the floor twelve hours.

Defeat Filibuster.

Senator Williams spoke about three quarters of an hour early tonight and then Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, took up the burden during the dinner hour with a speech vigorously criticizing President Harding for "wholesale dismissal" of bureau of engraving employees nearly a year ago.

Senator Williams said that filibustering was justifiable in two situations: To protect state rights and "when an accidental, incidental, temporary majority tries to forestall the future and defeat the will of the people as expressed at the last election."

The Mississippi senator referred to the "lame ducks" as "misrepresentatives" owing to their defeat, and said that everybody knew the shipping bill could not pass in the next congress. Attacking the recent speech of Senator Underwood, of Alabama, the democratic leader, in favor of the majority right to have a vote on the measure, Senator Williams said Mr. Underwood's position was "illogical and would lead to unequal results."

Referring to the right of "lame duck" senators to vote, he declared: "It is unethical and immoral to put this legislation over. It is treason to democracy. We should prevent it by every means within our power."

The cry of filibustering was hurled back at the republicans by Senator Jones, in charge of the shipping bill, who said that Senator Williams was the chief and head of the filibusters by denying other legislation that the people are in favor of.

An endeavor to bring about a recess through an offer to vote at 12 o'clock tomorrow on the pending Ladd motion to displace the shipping bill with the filled milk measure was made by Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, but Senator Jones objected, saying he believed the senate should continue in session.

Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, then took the floor after instructing pages to bring in two large maps, and began a discussion of his resolution authorizing the president to negotiate with Great Britain and France for the purchase of their Caribbean possessions.

Break Quorum.

But even filibustering reached a complete standstill at 10 o'clock when democratic and republican absentees broke a quorum.

The senate instructed its sergeant-at-arms to request absent senators to return, but a large number could not be found. Some were seen about the corridors, but a long search by assistant sergeant-at-arms, pages and other attendants, who delved into nooks and corners, failed to locate a considerable number. During the search the senate was idle, republican leaders chatting and others taking their ease on the floor and in the lobby.

After the loss of a half hour a quorum was obtained when an order for the arrest of absentees was voted. The missing members, however, suddenly appeared before the exercise of any extraordinary measures. But the filibuster immediately retaliated by forcing another series of roll calls.

Order Arrests.

The senatorial attendance barometers fluctuated under various roll calls. The order for arrest of senators brought in Senators Nelson, republican, Minnesota; McCumber, republican, North Dakota; and Frelinghuysen, republican, New Jersey, all in evening clothes, and they were greeted with applause by their colleagues.

After an hour and a half the democrats dropped their points of order and Senator Reed resumed his speech, remarking on the "wholly unnecessary delay."

He also expressed satisfaction with the appearance of the members in evening clothes, including Vice-President Coolidge, and commented on the "wide expanse of boiled shirts."

"These caused the senator from New York (Mr. Wadsworth) to remark: 'Here comes a herd of Herefords,'" said Senator Reed.

work." Harrison declared emphatically.

Many Hardships.

The negroes described how they were crowded into cold and filthy tenements, where members of their race sickened and died. Lodging cost them $6 to $8 per week and they had to furnish their own coal or wood and lights, they said. They made about 40 cents an hour, Harrison said, as laborers on construction work, but it took every cent they made to buy food and clothing enough to keep warm. "You can't make nothing up there," Harrison asserted.

Greenwood undertakers stated yesterday that out of every group of negroes going north, a certain per cent usually came back in caskets in a few months after their departure from the south. Not a week passes without a few caskets, bearing the bodies of Greenwood negroes who have died in the north, coming back for interment. In spite of the frightful death rate in the north, negroes are leaving this locality.

RHEUMATISM PAINS ARE NOW IN SEASON

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinges of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.—(adv.)

from the tracks of the Central of Georgia railroad into the negro cemetery. According to the woman, Lee asked the pair where they had been and was told "we're just coming out of the woods." Lee then told the negroes he was not satisfied with their statement and believed he would give them a copy of charges.

Cross immediately got angry and said he would not take any subpoena. The woman accepted the copy tendered her while Cross tore up the copy handed him and threw the fragments in Lee's face. The officer then attempted to arrest the negro, reaching into his pocket for his nippers. As he did this, Cross, a very powerful black, grappled with Lee and almost immediately got possession of the officer's pistol, a large calibre weapon.

He began firing while Lee groped for his second pistol, which he carried in accordance with a compulsory regulation of the American police department. When the firing began the Brookins woman fled and continued running until she reached police barracks, almost a mile distant, where she reported the affair.

Lee has been an officer here many years, being connected with the Sumter county convict gang before becoming a police officer. He was highly esteemed here. He is survived by his wife and several children, all of them grown.

INDUSTRY GROWTH OF SOUTH IS CITED

Moore Says Changed Industrial Condition Demands Change in Freight Rate Arrangements.

Industry in the south has grown vastly in the last 40 years and now demands changed transportation arrangements to keep pace with it, Harry T. Moore, secretary of the Atlanta freight bureau, testified Tuesday in support of petition of southeastern shippers for uniform mileage class rates instead of the existing group and differential basis, at the hearing before the interstate commerce commission at the Piedmont hotel.

The hearing is being conducted by Commissioner Joseph C. Eastman, of the Georgia public service commission, and Examiner W. J. Wagner, of the interstate commerce commission, with whom are sitting James A. Perry, of the Georgia public service commission, Alexander Forward, of the Virginia commission, Hudson Burr, of the Florida commission and A. J. Patterson, of the Alabama commission.

Hearings began in May, 1922, and have been conducted since then at a Touches Southeast.

Rates which it is proposed to change apply to shipments by rail and water in territory south of the Potomac and Ohio rivers and east of the Mississippi river. In point of territory covered, it is the largest investigation ever undertaken by the interstate commerce commission.

Cross-examination of Mr. Moore during the proceedings Tuesday was directed toward breaking down testimony he had given in May of last year in Atlanta, and in December of last year in New York. During these previous sittings Mr. Moore represented the Atlanta freight bureau and shippers in cities of Georgia, Alabama and portions of Tennessee.

In appearing before the commission Mr. Moore contended that the group and differential rate worked to disadvantage of shippers, and presented facts and figures in effort to establish this point.

Neon W. Proctor, counsel for the Louisville & Nashville railroad, assisted by C. J. Rixey, counsel for the Southern, conducted the cross-examination of Mr. Moore to try to establish through his testimony in the examination that the group and differential rate system, for the continuation of which the carriers are contending, had been in use for forty years and has proven satisfactory.

Conditions Changed.

Mr. Moore's reply to this point was that conditions had materially changed in the south during the past forty years, and that these changes made necessary changes in the rate system. In support of this contention Mr. Moore called attention to the growth of manufacturing in the south and declared that manufacturers in the south were entitled to mileage rates that would enable them to compete with each other according to distance. Formerly, he declared, the manufactured goods had come from other sections, and it was a matter of distribution, without having to take into consideration present conditions which have to do with competition between southern manufacturers themselves.

PAPERS SERVED ON ASA G. CANDLER IN BREACH SUIT

Papers in the case of Mrs. Onezima de Bouchel vs. Asa G. Candler were served on Mr. Candler by United States Deputy Marshal T. A. Wallace shortly before noon Tuesday.

The case charging breach of promise and asking for judgment in the sum of $500,000 was docketed Tuesday, and service of papers effected in time to make it returnable for the March term, which court officials declare most likely means that trial of the case will not come up before the December term.

According to officials, an answer from the defendant is required at the March term, beginning on the second Monday in March. The case will then be set for trial at the next session of court, October, but the October term will most likely be taken up with criminal cases, so that this case, being in the civil division, will most likely be delayed until the December term.

NO FINAL CONCLUSION AT NAVAL STORES MEET

No final conclusion was reached at the conference of naval stores producers and carriers held in the offices of the Southern Freight association Monday in March. The case will then be set for trial at the next session of court, October, but the October term will most likely be taken up with criminal cases, so that this case, being in the civil division, will most likely be delayed until the December term.

Request for postponement was taken under consideration by carriers with the understanding that they would consider the matter during the current week. It will be announced at the termination of this week whether or not postponement can be made.

JETT RECOGNIZED AS POLICE CHIEF ceive the same consideration as other unpaid bills against members of the police department, eight patrolmen having been temporarily suspended during the past two weeks for failing to pay their obligations in a specified length of time by the committee.

"The bad debt committee will not discriminate in favor of Chief Beavers or any other ranking officers in the police department," declared Councilman Beall. "We will give him several days to pay this account and unless he arranges a satisfactory settlement with Mrs. McWhorter, he will be suspended like others have been recently."

Says He Has Paid Bill.

Chief Beavers, when asked for a statement regarding the matter, declared that he possessed a receipt in full payment of the alleged claim against him. He stated that he had contracted with Mrs. McWhorter to multigraph the letters during the unavailability primary and several days later had made full settlement of the bill.

"There's something wrong somewhere," asserted Chief Beavers. "I have a receipt in full payment for the bill of Mrs. McWhorter, having paid her for the services several days after the primary last fall. Some time after I had paid this bill, I received an anonymous letter telling me that an effort would be made to collect this bill again. I went to Mrs. McWhorter's office in the Hurt building and asked her to give me a receipt in full for the amount. She did so. Since that time I have heard nothing from her or anyone else in connection with my owing this bill."

"Beavers Really Suspended."

Mayor Sims, in announcing his position with regard to the status of the police situation, declared he had not had time since his return from Florida to study closely the injunction order restraining the police committee from interfering with Chief Beavers in the performance of his official duties, but it was his opinion that the order did not change the committee's action in suspending the chief.

"The committee has officially suspended Chief Beavers," declared the mayor. "and appointed Assistant Chief Jett as acting chief of police. As I see it, the injunction order of Judge Bell's does not lift this suspension, but simply restrains the committee from interfering with Chief Beavers until March 3."

"I shall therefore insist that while the suspension order prevails no salary is paid to Chief Beavers during this time. So far as I have been able to study the situation, it is my opinion that Assistant Chief Jett is the legal head of the police department."

"It is my intention to go into the matter thoroughly with the police committee and city attorney. After I have done so, I shall then be prepared to announce the definite course the city intends following."

Fight on Committee.

Alderman J. L. Carpenter, who introduced an ordinance in council Monday to curb the authority of the police committee and vest in general council and the mayor alone the right to pass definite matters relating to administration of the police department, declared Tuesday that he was contemplating another move in that direction, in the event the present fight is lost.

The measure of Alderman Carpenter was referred to the ordinance committee and will probably come up in council at the next meeting.

"If the fight for the pending ordinance is lost," declared Mr. Carpenter, "it is my intention to frame another measure which would increase the personnel of the police committee from five to twelve members, or one representative from each ward."

At council's meeting Monday an ordinance was introduced by Alderman Oscar Williamson and Councilman Horace Russell to abolish the purchasing committee and restore control of that department to Purchasing Agent Landers. Like the measure of Alderman Carpenter on the police matter, this was also referred to the ordinance committee, the hearings to be held next week. It was announced.

Spence Kaps Committee.

The statement of Attorney Spence was as follows: "I know this police committee is trying by any unfair or illegal means to depose Chief Beavers, but everybody is laughing at it."

"The committee is talking loudly to keep up its courage but I am sure it will have sense enough not to violate Judge Bell's ruling."

"As to Mrs. McWhorter's pretended claim, Chief Beavers will publish on Wednesday a photographic copy of her receipt in full in her own handwriting."

"If any more fake debts are dug up against him, his friends are prepared to deposit in banks the cash to cover them instantly, and will promptly vouch the alleged claimants into court to prove their claims."

One of the outstanding social events in the collegiate activities this week will be the "Home Coming Concert" to be given by the Emory Glee club at the Atlanta theater, Friday and Saturday evenings.

A varied and beautiful array of musical novelties will feature the program this year, given by the "South's Sweetest Singers," as the members of the glee club have become known. Among the most popular group songs on the program are "Glorious Forenoon," by Rachmaninoff; "Give a Rose," by Bantock; "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," by Anderson; "Chit Chat," by Moffatt, and several delightful negro folk songs. A violin solo by Samuel H. Proger, talented young Atlanta artist, and a burlesque piece organization which is almost as well known to Atlantans as the glee club, will appear in some brilliant instrumental selections. The "Raymond Overture" and a medley of American college songs have received especial praise from critics.

The sale of tickets opened at the Atlanta box office Monday morning, and will continue throughout the week. Tickets for the alumni banquet, preceding the Friday night performance, may also be obtained there.

PLAN TO CLARIFY NATION'S LAWS

litigation is begun, create delay and suspense."

Restate the law in plain, simple terms and you do away with disrespect for law which arises through misunderstanding, the committee believes, adding that when laws are disregarded "the rich are more apt to use their wealth to oppress, the business man is more apt to cheat, and those in immediate want are more apt to steal."

A council of twenty-one will carry on the researches and writings of the American Law institute, it is planned. This council will devote itself first of all to the subjects: Conflict of laws, torts and corporations. Five years or more may be required for these matters alone.

The committee "feels strongly" that the statement of principles should not be adopted by state legislatures as a code. It is pointed out that one feature of the common law is its flexibility, and that another is the greater fullness with which it is possible, by an examination of the decisions of the courts, to express the law. Both of these features the committee regards as of inestimable value, and one of the other would be lost by codification.

Mrs. C. K. Ayer Plans Tea at Woman's Club

Mrs. C. K. Ayer announces a silver tea at the Atlanta Woman's club on Thursday afternoon, February 22, for the benefit of the Community Home for Girls. Mrs. Ayer and the members of the Atlanta Woman's club will receive in the palm room and will have on display a number of articles of handcraft work of the Community Home girls. This being the afternoon on which Mrs. Boykin's regular weekly teas are held, all who call at the invitation of Mrs. Boykin and the publicity department of the club are invited by Mrs. Ayer to give a moment's time to inspection of the exhibit she will have on display. Mrs. Boykin will receive in the main reception room.

As chairman of the women's club community home committee, Mrs. Ayer carries on welfare work that reaches into the very depths of the life of a city, into those too long neglected by the average woman, and her hands reach out and literally thrust hope and cheer within the grasp of those whom a moment before her coming were grimed with despair and utter desolation. Into this home are received girls and young women who have felt the horror of prison bars and returning to the world ask a chance to make good, a chance to earn an honest living. Into the paths and the tragedy of life as they have found it the Community Home seeks to inject the courage and the training to go straight. And into the home such committees as Mrs. Ayer's carries a message of future well-being and substantial help toward teaching life.

Reception Honors Brenau Faculty And Student Body

Gainesville, Ga., February 20.—A brilliant affair of Saturday evening was the reception given by the faculty and cadets of Riverside Military academy honoring the faculty and student body of Brenau college.

In Lanier hall where the guests were received the decorations were elaborate in every detail, both in the interior and on the exterior of the spacious building. On the outside at the extreme top of the building fitted in six consecutive spaces were large letters spelling "Brenau," which were illumined by electric lights. At the base of the columns small pines were banded and on the right of the terrace was a miniature garden made to resemble the lovely garden on the Brenau campus.

The guests assembled in the foyer, which was attractively decorated in the Riverside colors of blue and white. Hundreds of streamers of blue and white crepe paper were suspended from the central chandelier to the four corners of the room and small pines and palms were banded artistically against the doors and columns. At either corner of the large stone fireplace palms and pines were grouped most effectively and across the front in electric-lighted letters was heralded "Welcome Brenau." The three alcoves were used as company centers, each being decorated in company colors with the company letters suspended from above.

The receiving line stood at the base of the large stairway which was entwined with blue and white crepe paper streamers and banded artistically with palms and small pines. Receiving were Colonel and Mrs. Sandy Weaver, Miss Mary Troutman, Colonel O. R. Horton, Captain and Mrs. W. D. Mooney, Captain and Mrs. Cunningham, Captain and Mrs. Alfred Betterson, Assistant in entertaining were Mrs. Benjamin Gailard, Mrs. G. D. Howell, of Atlanta; Miss Mary Brown, Miss Georgia Dickinson, of Atlanta; Miss Nell Murphy, Miss Elsie and Miss Ingram.

Mrs. Sandy Weaver wore an elaborate gown of black sequins over salmon-colored satin. Miss Mary Troutman wore a gown of black silk with Spanish lace. Mrs. Cunningham's gown was of eider blue crepe combined with cloth of silver. Mrs. Alfred Betterson wore a beautiful gown of black Chantilly lace with touches of coral.

Brilliant and elaborate decorations were used in the immense gymnasium, where the main color motif was orange and black, the Brenau colors, which were used most effectively in myriads of crepe paper streamers which draped the entire ceiling. Hundreds of small pines were used to flank the four sides of the hall and at intervals spaces were converted into miniature fraternity headquarters, brilliantly illuminated with the electrical insignias of the three Riverside fraternities—Alpha Sigma Phi, Theta Sigma and Omega Phi Alpha. The battalion headquarters occupied a similar attractive space with the national and regimental colors draped against the background of the Riverside blue and white.

The assembling of the cadets in their dress uniforms and the heavy of beautifully gowned Brenau girls made a beautiful picture commencing through the brilliantly lighted rooms. Colonel O. R. Horton acted as official host and presiding over the supper course each guest was presented with a valentine from an improvised postoffice fashioned heart shape and made of red lattice work. This was followed by a word contest of the cadets and red hearts and the presentation of prizes and a try at the grab bag, where unique favors were received. Miss Nell Murphy, in a striking gray costume, made a charming fortune-teller.

During the evening the Riverside orchestra rendered an enjoyable program of the latest music, and at 11 o'clock a

Miss Stewart Is Honor Guest.

Miss Pauline Stewart, of Cincinnati, Ohio, the attractive guest of Miss Carrie Foy Yarbrough, was honor guest at a bridge-ten on Tuesday afternoon at which Miss Elizabeth Barrett entertained at her home on Piedmont avenue.

The rooms where the guests were received were effectively decorated by a profusion of pink roses, narcissi and jonquils.

Miss Barrett wore a lovely gown of sand crepe.

Miss Stewart was gowned in black and white satin embroidered in chenille. She wore a hat of black straw.

The guests were: Misses Bee Porter and her guest, Mary Billard Harper, of Gainesville; Margaret Graham, of Yorktown; Emile Montgomer, of Virginia; Mrs. M. E. McCall, of Atlanta; Mrs. Hiram Flanagan, of Windor; Mrs. E. R. Hines, of Milledgeville; Mrs. R. W. Boyce, of Willacochee; Mrs. J. E. Mercer, of Vidalia.

Miss Ida Tarbell's Lectures Eagerly Awaited

"When she first came up here to live," said an old farmer of Miss Ida Tarbell and her country place near Bridgeport, Conn., "we were all scared about having so smart a person for a neighbor, but she ain't like that at all, she's just the same as us folks." And this is perhaps the best description of Miss Tarbell which can ever be written, for, though she is brilliant, intellectual and famous, she is "just the same as us folks."

The lecture which Miss Tarbell will give Tuesday at the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club will be one of the delightful events of the winter and is being anticipated with more than usual eagerness.

The Story of Camel's Hair

Dates Back to the Days of the Pharaohs

LONG before the much talked of King Tut-anh-Amen was laid to rest after the extraordinary manner of the ancient Pharaohs the Egyptians had learned the secret of camel's hair. Nature had mercifully provided "the ship of the desert" with a silky hair that keeps off the extreme heat of mid-day and the chill of desert nights. So the Egyptians wove garments of camel's hair for themselves—

Confessions of a Debutante

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.
I ran away from my fiancé, Jonathan Gray, rich and elderly, to the arms of Larry, a man who dances well, his wife.

INSTALLMENT NO. 23.
"Withered Rose Leaves."

Saturday, January 6.
The walk curved and hid the figure from view a moment. When the place was visible no one was there. I found myself quite alone except for the traffic in the street.

I walked quietly back home, wondering the while whether my imagination would never rest. Was I to be haunted forever, I wondered, by the ghost of an affection I had discarded?

It seemed to me that strange, dark youth could never be more real to me than he was at that moment. I could inspire such a love. It seemed to me that strange, dark youth could never be more real to me than he was at that moment.

Sometimes I half wished that I had never known what it meant to be truly loved. Because what we do not know we can not miss. And yet, if all the missing were taken out of the world it would be like a day all glaring sun and no cooling shadow. I was glad in the summing up, even to have him to miss!

I have just about come to the place where I think a woman, the right sort of woman, must love something. And I'd rather love this shadow of My Stranger than anything else—though I'm flatter myself that I'm the right sort of a woman. If I was I'd take the rose by its thorny stem and fight the thing out with the man I love.

I'm a weakling, just like all the others of my crowd. The girls who haven't money all try to marry it, regardless of the man who accompanies the coin.

Before I started to dress I looked at the bouquet of roses that I have pressed and read again the lines which came with them. With the words of the song it all came back—the dance, his eyes looking down into mine, the ride, my dream of little folk whose eyes were dark and whose faces were sensitively lovely.

Flowers from Jonathan had been delivered while I was away in the afternoon. I had left them just as the maid arranged them. The dozens and dozens of roses which arrive regularly from Jonathan irritate me.

Flowers are the rightful gift of only a genuine fondness. Otherwise they seem to lose much of their charm. That dried bouquet of roses thrilled me as all of the heavily scented, colorful blooms Jonathan had sent could not do.

Under the spell of those roses I dreamed and drew my hair into a soft knot held by a jeweled comb.

Still under the spell of them I started out, later in the evening, with Jonathan. It was a theater party this time. As the evening wore on the memory of the dried blooms became more and more distinct. Their vague fragrance haunted me and acted like wind in my blood.

I flirted madly and unreservedly and shamelessly. I made no secret thing of smiling at one of the players and when Jimmie Innes took my hand and began saying foolish things, I encouraged it.

Jonathan sat behind us. Somehow when we got out together he always is shifted into the position of an extra if there are other men about!

Jimmie leaned toward me. "You're beautiful tonight," he said. "I think I'm falling in love with you."

"I know you're lying—but I like to hear you say it," I replied in an undertone.

As the words were finished I felt a heavy hand on my arm.

Miss Bennett
In Beauty Gallery.

In the March issue of "The Red Book," national magazine, is a full-page photograph of Miss Belle Bennett, Forsyth Players' star.

The photograph is in "The Art Section of Beautiful Women," of the Red Book. It takes a like photo of Wanda Hawley, film star.

The photograph of Miss Bennett was in a costume worn by her in "Lawful Larceny," in which she starred on Broadway for more than a year. The photograph, which has been described as one of the most characteristic poses in which the photographer has snapped the popular Forsyth Players' star, is similar to one of those on display in the lobby of the Forsyth theater.

Art Exhibit
At Woman's Club.

The art exhibit now on view in the Atlanta Woman's club gallery is a collection of the paintings of Philip McConnell, an Atlanta artist who has had fine academic training in the eastern art schools.

These paintings show interesting and unusual technique and poetic composition. The collection includes conventional flower studies and misty landscapes of a peculiar charm, painted almost entirely with palette knife which permits of iridescent effects not possible in brush work.

Mr. McConnell's work has received substantial appreciation in New York as well as in Atlanta, where many art lovers have patronized his studio. The present exhibit in the Woman's club has been hung by Mr. McConnell in compliance to the art department of the Woman's club, and purchases therefrom will benefit Tallulah Falls school extension work.

Household Suggestions

For Better Wear.
Hosiery should be washed after each wearing to remove any perspiration and to avoid a continuous stain on the same part of the stocking.

Another Rust Remover.
Rhubarb juice, squeezed from the ends of the fresh stalks, will remove rust from clothing more quickly than the well-known method and salt.

Should It Fall.
If the boiled frosting for cake refuses to harden through not enough cooking, place it in a double boiler for about five minutes, stirring constantly. Then beat and spread and it will be creamy enough to stay on the cake.

Home Helps.
Remove the seeds from the sliced lemon for tea.

Never cook stews quickly or the meat will be hard and tough.

Canned tomatoes brighten up the casserole made of left-over meat.

Leave the oven door open when lighting the gas stove, just for safety's sake.

Repapering a room or two will sometimes make the whole house seem more attractive.

Add a half-cup of vinegar to the water in which you boil your next ham and note the improvement.

What Women Wear

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

The upturned brim has won its place in millinery and now women must learn to pose the hat in a way that does not detract from their features nor mar their style. It is difficult, but it can be managed.

No revolution arises over night. Historians say this. The public doesn't. It thinks some vital change has occurred while it was looking on, but the change has been evolving for a year or more. So is it with all fashions, dress, manners, politics. There are few if any, revolutions. Experts watch the experiments of designers. The public merely thinks that what it sees in shops and on neighbors is settled. That's why it thinks a change arrives overnight.

Such is the history of the upturned brim on our new spring hats. Milliners have been fighting to give women uncovered eyes for a year, but only those who dip deep into new fashions saw the revolutionary trend of brims, even though they continued to cover the eyes with down-turned shapes and masquerade veils. Suddenly, to the public the brim flared upward. It rolled backward, now, from the face on small and large hats, but it does not attempt this trick with a small crown. It knows better. Nor does it even touch the crown. It does not flatten back like a dog's ears when it sees something it doesn't like.

There are immense black velvet hats with brims five inches wide that roll upward and outward. There are turbans with several nizable crowns larger than the head surrounded by rolling brims which remind one of a little boy's hat. Possibly the designers got their suggestions from just such an article. The man's hat which has been worn for a year in Europe by women of fashion, appears in our shop windows as a new offering. When milliners found women liked it, they searched, probably, through juvenile costumery and hit upon this soft shape with a rolling brim bound with a ribbon.

The sketch shows one of beige-colored straw, its brim edged with ribbon, the side of its crown decorated with a petal-shaped piece of straw, also edged with ribbon from the center of which fall ribbon loops to one shoulder.

This type of hat is often made of wide ribbon, its crown divided into sections outlined with braid or fancy galloon, the brim wired to keep its shape, for few women can stand a disorderly brim.

Not all these upturning brims are regular in outline like a saucer. Some are elongated at sides, others dip and fall like an airplane.

So much for the shape. The real difficulty lies in the adjustment. The woman who imagines she can show her forehead under such brims will look her worst in such a hat if she carries out the idea. It must be placed as far over the brows as the helmet hat.

It is not intended to show more than an inch of hair at back.

BEAUTY CHATS
BY EDNA K. FORBES

CHOOSE GOOD CORSETS.
Do you really need corsets? Most women don't. My belief is that most women put on corsets not to mould nor support the figure, but to improve its shape, but simply because the shops offer them and other people wear them. Proof of this is that they generally buy any style that please their fancy, or their purses.

besides those of the chest and back. Increase your weight by drinking plenty of milk and taking as much olive oil with your meals as you can with little thought as to whether it is the type of corset they may need.

Corsets are made in stock sizes and human bodies aren't, so no amount of lacing and taking in will ever make them conform actually to the shape of the woman's figure. The result is that they reduce all figures to a certain monotonous likeness varying only in bulk and exactly the same in contour.

The greatest charm of the feminine figure is the variety and delicacy of its curves, in short its individuality. What a shame, for instance, to take the broad shouldered, flat and boyish figure and give it a small waist and round hips merely because a pair of corsets forces it into such a shape.

What a pity to take the supple curves of a figure and give it the stiffness and rigid curves of a well-filled pair of corsets. What a pity to take away the elasticity of any figure by putting on a figure and giving it the stiffness and rigid curves of a well-filled pair of corsets.

In short, what a pity to wear corsets! There are, however, exceptions. If you are fat you had better compress the fleshy curves into a semblance of even stiff youthfulness, but you had best, of course, reduce. If you are old and inelastic you will sacrifice little and you may gain better lines by corseting the figure. But in any case your corsets should be lightly boned, well made and as expensive as you can afford.

CHAPTER LXXXVII

The Stowaways.

It took some time to transfer the passengers' baggage from the smaller boat to the liner. Cynthia, feeling like an outcast, established herself in a deck chair in an out-of-the-way corner, she tucked her overnight bag under the chair, and carefully avoided the stewards who were finding the passengers' rooms for them.

People were taking home all kinds of souvenirs. One stout spectacled man was carrying an enormous grapefruit, and his wife had a hideous doll made of dried seaweed. Cynthia wondered what on earth she planned to do with it when she got home. And how the dust would settle on it!

There were others who were taking home various tropical fruits—which would decay before the next day's sun rose, unless they were kept on ice. And they couldn't keep them there indefinitely. Cynthia reflected, "Besides, all those things can be bought in the big fruit stores in New York. But that wouldn't be the same as taking them clear from here, I suppose."

Trunks were being hoisted from the small boat into the hold of the larger one; they went swinging through the air, then dropped down swiftly into the hold. A bandbox, covered with gay, flowered paper, looked like a tropical bird as it went its way. Cynthia saw her own trunk—what fun she and Roger had had when they bought it in London, when they were on their honeymoon! Her heart ached at the memory.

Lucile curled up on the foot of her deck chair.

"Just saw a trunk smashed," she volunteered. "I was standing over here at the rail, when something about the machinery slipped, and the trunk dropped with what was certainly a sickening crash. A man was standing next me, and he was awful—

People were taking home all kinds of souvenirs.

It's likely to be pretty windy right here, Madam," he told Cynthia. "Shan't I move your chair down there, where you'll be more comfortable?"

"No, I'd rather stay here where there isn't so much spanglers on both sides of me," she replied, giving him one of her cards to put in the frame on the back of the chair. "And bring some tea now, please."

"With lots of guava jelly," urged

Lucile. "I saw big bricks of it being taken into the smoking room. And I want some cream cheese, too."

"That guava jelly from Havana is like India rubber, child," Cynthia reminded her, but Lucile only laughed.

"I like it that way," she declared. "Though I'll admit that you could knock a man down with a slab of it. Well, where are we going to sleep?"

"I don't know. I don't dare go to the purser until the ship is well under way—he might send us back to Nassau on the small ship you know. I don't want to risk that. It would be dreadful to go back now."

"Oh, we've got to go on if we have to stand up nights!" Lucile declared. "There must be a corner for us somewhere on a ship as big as this one. But I never realized before how attractive a stateroom can look. A complaining about here; she said that it had only one portfolio, and never before had she slept in a cabin that didn't have two! Besides, one of the electric lights didn't work. I wanted to tell her that she needn't use that room if she didn't want to; that I'd be glad to sleep there. Oh well—it'll be only three nights, anyway."

"If we have good weather," Cynthia reminded her. "If there should be a bad storm we'd be delayed, probably. I know how the people felt when war broke out in 1914. One of my friends slept on deck six nights, she said she never slept in her stateroom on another trip. She said the air was wonderful, and that with plenty of cushions and rugs she was perfectly comfortable!"

"I never yet saw a deck chair that a person could really stretch out in," objected Lucile. "They're always too short, or else the foot rest hits you in the wrong place. I wonder, don't you think we'd better go to the purser now and get the agony over? Still, here comes the steward with tea."

"I'll see the purser and you can begin tea," Cynthia replied. She hurried down to his office, her heart fluttering.

He was sitting at his desk, and glanced up, then rose as she entered. Before she could speak, Cynthia said, "I'm a stowaway," she told him.

3968. This "slip on" apron may well serve as a dress—it has such pleasing lines, is trim and neat, and envelops the figure most protectively. The new prints and cretonnes are nice for this style, as are also percale and saten.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size will require four yards of 36-inch material.

because of the work of the flames, but it was found that the only wiring in the room was for electric lights, and that these wires were properly insulated. Making it highly improbable that the fire started from this source is the fact that the roof was burned away with hands of white, it makes a smart "tea" frock.

Parents Discover Fire

The fire was discovered shortly after 12:30 Tuesday morning by John M. McDowell, until recently editor of the DeKalb New Era, and father of the two girls who lost their lives. He was sleeping in a room adjoining that occupied by the girls, and was awakened by what is thought to have been a slight explosion, probably caused by an accumulation of smoke and gases in the room, or possibly from gasoline or kerosene.

He leaped from his bed and rushed to the door, hardly realizing at first what was happening. His sudden movement awakened Mrs. McDowell, who jumped from her bed.

Rushing into the hall they found the door to the girls' room closed and bolted from the inside, something unknown before in their home, according to Mrs. McDowell, who stated that she had instructed them from early childhood to leave their door open at night so that other members of the family might easily reach them in case of possible trouble of any kind.

Inside they could hear the roaring and crackling of the flames. They called to their daughters, but received no reply. Frantically they continued their efforts to reach the girls, but were blocked. Finally, in her desperation, Mrs. McDowell saw she lunged against the door and the lock was broken in.

Slightly Burned.

As the door was pushed in a mass of flames from the roaring furnace within met her full in the face, staggering her. Recovering slightly she rushed into the girls' room, but could not reach them because of the smoke and the flames. She has no clear recollection of events following this.

Mr. McDowell then rushed to reach his daughters, but the flames licking around his feet and ankles finally burned him so severely that he was forced to leave the house.

The bereaved parents were seen late Tuesday afternoon in the living room of the home of P. C. Carnes, 645 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, brother-in-law of Mr. McDowell, and it was there that they told Decatur police what they knew of the tragedy.

Mr. McDowell seems so badly stunned by the loss of his young daughter and from his injuries received in his vain efforts to save their lives that he was unable to tell much of what happened. Mrs. McDowell, however, seemed eager to assist in every way possible in the solving of the mystery.

Mrs. McDowell's Story.

"When we succeeded in breaking the lock and rushed into the flaming room, we were at once driven back by the flames," she said. "There was a who is about 18 years old, retired early and closed the door to his room so he would not be disturbed by the other members of the family. I cautioned them all again at that time to leave the room doors open at night."

Mrs. McDowell was questioned closely as to any person who might, for any reason, have a grudge against any member of her family and wish to do them harm. At first she stated that so far as she knew they had not an enemy in the world. After more thought, however, she recalled discussing her negro cook a few days ago.

Tells of Cook.

"I secured the services of a new cook about a month ago," she said. "She was Dinnie Nix, and came here from Covington. I had missed some silverware and questioned her about it. She denied knowing anything of the missing silverware, and was very impudent when I questioned her about it."

As she was slovenly in her work about the house I finally decided to dispense with her services, notifying her on Saturday, February 10, that I did not want her any more. She was very impudent and was mattering to herself as she left the house. She, and possibly her husband, are the only ones I can think of who might have any feeling of ill will against us."

Additional Theory.

In addition to the two arrests made, investigators also are working on the theory that the fire is the work of a chloroform burglar, evidences of whose work have been found in several parts of Atlanta recently.

To add credence to this theory is the fact that no scream was heard from the girls' room at any time during the fire. Had they not been drugged in some way, it is thought they would have uttered some sound before their death.

Marion, the older girl, was 17 years old and a senior at the Decatur High school. Willie Matteo, 15 years old, was a student at the high school. Both ranked very high in their studies, according to school officials.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in the Decatur Baptist church. Every body in the house in Decatur closed from 2 o'clock, the hour of the funeral, and the high school was closed all day as a mark of respect to the dead girls.

Classmates Bear Bodies.

Twelve of their classmates acted as pallbearers, and the entire student body of the school attended the services in a body. The church was filled to capacity and many were unable to enter, the crowd overflowing into the churchyard.

The pallbearers were Misses Annie Felton, Ethel Felton, Ruth Perrine, Caroline McKinney, Ethel Brown, Eleanor Hopkins, Thelma Thompson, Frances Freeman, Lucile Phippen, Mary Sayward, Imogene Allen and Annie Johnson.

Following the ceremony the bodies were sent to Acworth for interment.

Simple Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this two ounces of calamine powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dirt and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calamine powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.—(adv.)

A. S. Turner, funeral director, of Decatur, was in charge.

According to members of the Decatur fire department, the ceiling in the girls' room never did fall in, and was only just burning through when they arrived with the apparatus. From work on their part saved most of the remaining parts of the house from fire damage, although everything is water-soaked.

The firemen were called back three other times during the morning to extinguish remaining sparks in the building. The second call came in about 2:30, they say; the third about 5 o'clock and the last shortly after 6:30.

On the last call it was found that the mattress on the girls' bed was smoldering, but that the quilts on the bed were scorched only around the edges. The house bears remarkably few scars to show the fatal fire there. The damage in the hall is believed to have followed the opening of the door to the room by the frantic mother.

Mrs. McDowell states she and her husband will leave as soon as he is able to travel for a short trip.

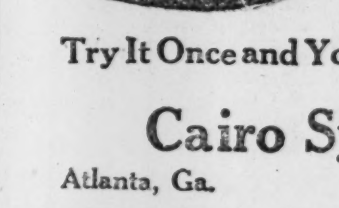

Energy required to boil away a kettle of water could lift a ten-story building fifty feet into the air.

IF SICK, BILIOUS! START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee!

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

"Tell me, Miss Esther, don't you know that Heston is not his real name?"
She shook her head. "I won't lie to you, Mr. Carroll—it's no use now. But I can't answer that question."
"That's tantamount to an admission. We'll let it drop. Where is Heston now?"
"I—I don't know exactly where he is."
"He is on his way to Karnak, isn't he?"
"I—I can't say."
"You still insist that you were at Furness Lodge a little after 6 o'clock on the afternoon of the 9th?"
"Yes, I was there."
"Alone?"
"Yes."
"What did you go there for?"
"To hunt for that ring."
"How did you happen to lose it there?"
"My engagement to Heston was a secret, and so I wore the ring around my neck on a ribbon. I had been at the lodge for some time, and I must have been at the lodge, because I missed it shortly after leaving there."
"You met no one on your way to the lodge on the 9th?"
"No. That is, no one except Mart Farman."
"Where was he?"
"Walking toward his cabin. He had evidently been to Nixon's. He had been drinking."
"Does the road from Nixon's to his cabin pass the lodge?"
"Yes."
"Did Farman speak to you at all?"
"His face flushed, yes. You're not very fond of him, are you, Miss Esther?"
"No. I loathe him. I—I told him so."
"That afternoon?"
"Yes."
"He—he—" Her cheeks became scarlet. "He spoke nastily about Mr. Heston and me, and said I had disgraced myself."
"And you—?"
"I slapped his face and walked on. He was drunk."
"And you are quite convinced that he didn't know there was any one at the lodge?"
"I am sure. He would have mentioned it if he'd known. Mart always tells what he knows."
"How long were you in the lodge?"
"Only about three minutes. I entered the back veranda and walked through the dog-trail. By the cat-chair I was sure that something was wrong. I left through the front door and struck right through the trees to my right toward Mr. Heston's cabin."
"He was there when you got there?"
"Yes. He had just been fishing. He had a string of fish with him."
"He seemed quiet and calm?"
"Yes. Oh, I'm sure, Mr. Carroll, that he'd been nowhere near the lodge."
"He knew that the folks were there didn't he?"
"Yes—he had known it since the previous day. He says the cat-chair came out with some supplies, and had trouble with his car about a mile from the lodge. Mr. Heston then had time to remove his belongings from the lodge to the cabin before the men arrived there, and he watched from then on."
Carroll rose. "I'm very much obliged, Miss Esther. I'm sorry you found it necessary to tell me this while at the beginning but I understand now. I hope things will turn out all right."

Gray dusk had fallen over the swamp when Carroll ordered the car back to Furness lodge, and as it rolled into the swampy from the settlement, its powerful headlights piercing the fast-gathering gloom, he settled himself against the deep upholstery.
Once inside the lodge he refreshed himself and with Carter's assistance skinned about for a meal. The table was set in short order. But the next question as to what to do, gustatory enjoyment when the telephone in the living-room jangled insistently; two short rings, followed by two long ones.
Carroll reached the telephone in a few strides and placed the receiver to his ear, where, true to custom, he heard the clicking of other instruments along the general line. Hello!
The deep, resonant voice of Sheriff Potter came to his ears. "Hello! That you, Carroll?"
"Yes."
"I've been trying to get you for the last hour. Remember the friend you asked me about?"
"Heston?"
"Yes."
"What about him?"
"He tried to get away from here on the 7 o'clock train. I nabbed him and he's in jail awaiting your orders!"

CHAPTER XIV.
The first rays of the morning sun found the three men awake and bathing with gusto under the yard pump. A breakfast of eggs, coffee and crackery followed by a few perfunctory washes, the watchful Carter had found, satisfied them and they set out for Heston's cabin at the bend of the river.

They found it readily enough, padlocked as they had left it the previous afternoon. It was the work of only a moment to pry out the hasp with a fire tool from the automobile, and Carroll and Sullivan stepped inside, the latter throwing back the solid board screens which, bolted from the inside, covered the four windows.

The cabin was excessively neat within. Chintz curtains covered the windows. On a rude center table there were a few well-selected books by authors known to the world of science; Freud, Ellis, Bloch—novels and plays by Turgenyev, Artzbashev, Ibsen, Gorky, Maupassant, Dreiser, Hardy. An iron cot was in the far corner and opposite it a large packing case converted into a kitchen cabinet.
The room betrayed nothing. And finally the two men paused before a well-made trunk in the corner. With a word, Carroll broke the lock with a sharp-edged tire-tool; The lid flung back and the tray removed disclosed an array of tailored, expensive clothing; even to a full evening equipment.

Garment by garment Carroll removed the clothes from the trunk, piling them neatly that they might be returned without too great disarrangement. It was not until he reached the bottom of the trunk—after discovering that every tailor's tag had been carefully cut from the clothes—that he found anything worthwhile.
And that was a photograph: a photograph of a very pretty girl which gave evidence of having originally been in a frame from which it had been carefully removed. The photograph was under a blotter sheet in a small leather secretary; evidently not so long ago as the photograph of a woman, and—forgotten; a case of not of sight out of mind. But it was not the high forehead, the mass of brown hair, the perfect features of the pretty woman which attracted Carroll. Rather, it was the reverse side. For there, as he excitedly exhibited to Jim Sullivan, was an inscription in the clear, well-formed cursive of a woman's hand: "To George with love, Katherine Carr."

Sullivan whistled expressively. "Katherine Carr," he ejaculated. The initials K. C. on the ring you found?"
"Yes, and the George probably stands for the first of the man's initials. G. R. A. Quite evidently our Heston is named George and was once engaged to a Miss Katherine Carr of Newark, N. J."

Sullivan looked up in surprise. "What makes you say Newark?"
"The photographer's name," came the prompt answer as Carroll indicated the impression with his forefinger. "Newark, N. J. Obviously no person living within twenty-five or thirty miles of New York would patronize a Newark photographer unless that person was a resident of Newark and believed in fostering home industry."

Sullivan nodded. "Right again. You're becoming your normal self, David. What next?"
Less than two hours later they hopped across the railroad tracks which mark the actual eastern boundary of Karnak, and looked to a stop before the red brick courthouse.
Carroll was not surprised at Heston's cell just long enough to report progress without going into details. Then he made his way to the cell occupied by Conrad Heston.

Carroll was not surprised at Heston's physical appearance. His foreknowledge of the man had prepared him for just about what he saw: a man of about thirty years of age, well-groomed, clear-shaven, medium height; with light hair and level blue eyes.

"You know who we are?" asked Carroll.
"Yes," Heston, "friends of Stanford Forrest, determined free of a charge of which he is undoubtedly guilty. His tone was low, his enunciation clear, his bearing reserved."

"Not quite, Mr. Heston. We were here to find the guilty man."
"It is, of course, needless for me to assure you that I am not he."
The detective shrugged. He made his next question as casual as possible, but his narrow-lidded eyes were watching every play of facial expression.

"When did you last see Miss Katherine Carr?"
Heston's face twitched. He controlled himself with a visible effort. "I do not know of whom you are speaking," he answered in a low voice.

The man was lying and both Carroll and Sullivan knew it. To the latter's surprise, Carroll did not press his point.
"Why have you assumed an alias, Mr. Heston?"

"I've been trying to get you for the last hour. Remember the friend you asked me about?"
"Heston?"
"Yes."
"What about him?"
"He tried to get away from here on the 7 o'clock train. I nabbed him and he's in jail awaiting your orders!"

"Yes, and the George probably stands for the first of the man's initials. G. R. A. Quite evidently our Heston is named George and was once engaged to a Miss Katherine Carr of Newark, N. J."

Sullivan looked up in surprise. "What makes you say Newark?"
"The photographer's name," came the prompt answer as Carroll indicated the impression with his forefinger. "Newark, N. J. Obviously no person living within twenty-five or thirty miles of New York would patronize a Newark photographer unless that person was a resident of Newark and believed in fostering home industry."

Sullivan nodded. "Right again. You're becoming your normal self, David. What next?"
Less than two hours later they hopped across the railroad tracks which mark the actual eastern boundary of Karnak, and looked to a stop before the red brick courthouse.
Carroll was not surprised at Heston's cell just long enough to report progress without going into details. Then he made his way to the cell occupied by Conrad Heston.

Carroll was not surprised at Heston's physical appearance. His foreknowledge of the man had prepared him for just about what he saw: a man of about thirty years of age, well-groomed, clear-shaven, medium height; with light hair and level blue eyes.

"You know who we are?" asked Carroll.
"Yes," Heston, "friends of Stanford Forrest, determined free of a charge of which he is undoubtedly guilty. His tone was low, his enunciation clear, his bearing reserved."

"Not quite, Mr. Heston. We were here to find the guilty man."
"It is, of course, needless for me to assure you that I am not he."
The detective shrugged. He made his next question as casual as possible, but his narrow-lidded eyes were watching every play of facial expression.

"When did you last see Miss Katherine Carr?"
Heston's face twitched. He controlled himself with a visible effort. "I do not know of whom you are speaking," he answered in a low voice.

The man was lying and both Carroll and Sullivan knew it. To the latter's surprise, Carroll did not press his point.
"Why have you assumed an alias, Mr. Heston?"

"I've been trying to get you for the last hour. Remember the friend you asked me about?"
"Heston?"
"Yes."
"What about him?"
"He tried to get away from here on the 7 o'clock train. I nabbed him and he's in jail awaiting your orders!"

CHAPTER XIV.
The first rays of the morning sun found the three men awake and bathing with gusto under the yard pump. A breakfast of eggs, coffee and crackery followed by a few perfunctory washes, the watchful Carter had found, satisfied them and they set out for Heston's cabin at the bend of the river.

They found it readily enough, padlocked as they had left it the previous afternoon. It was the work of only a moment to pry out the hasp with a fire tool from the automobile, and Carroll and Sullivan stepped inside, the latter throwing back the solid board screens which, bolted from the inside, covered the four windows.

The cabin was excessively neat within. Chintz curtains covered the windows. On a rude center table there were a few well-selected books by authors known to the world of science; Freud, Ellis, Bloch—novels and plays by Turgenyev, Artzbashev, Ibsen, Gorky, Maupassant, Dreiser, Hardy. An iron cot was in the far corner and opposite it a large packing case converted into a kitchen cabinet.
The room betrayed nothing. And finally the two men paused before a well-made trunk in the corner. With a word, Carroll broke the lock with a sharp-edged tire-tool; The lid flung back and the tray removed disclosed an array of tailored, expensive clothing; even to a full evening equipment.

Garment by garment Carroll removed the clothes from the trunk, piling them neatly that they might be returned without too great disarrangement. It was not until he reached the bottom of the trunk—after discovering that every tailor's tag had been carefully cut from the clothes—that he found anything worthwhile.
And that was a photograph: a photograph of a very pretty girl which gave evidence of having originally been in a frame from which it had been carefully removed. The photograph was under a blotter sheet in a small leather secretary; evidently not so long ago as the photograph of a woman, and—forgotten; a case of not of sight out of mind. But it was not the high forehead, the mass of brown hair, the perfect features of the pretty woman which attracted Carroll. Rather, it was the reverse side. For there, as he excitedly exhibited to Jim Sullivan, was an inscription in the clear, well-formed cursive of a woman's hand: "To George with love, Katherine Carr."

Sullivan whistled expressively. "Katherine Carr," he ejaculated. The initials K. C. on the ring you found?"
"Yes, and the George probably stands for the first of the man's initials. G. R. A. Quite evidently our Heston is named George and was once engaged to a Miss Katherine Carr of Newark, N. J."

Sullivan looked up in surprise. "What makes you say Newark?"
"The photographer's name," came the prompt answer as Carroll indicated the impression with his forefinger. "Newark, N. J. Obviously no person living within twenty-five or thirty miles of New York would patronize a Newark photographer unless that person was a resident of Newark and believed in fostering home industry."

PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS ARRIVING FOR MACON EVENT

Idle Hour Course in Shape For Invitation Tournament; Contestants Are Practicing

Visiting Professional Declares Macon Golf Course Will Compare Favorably With Best in United States.

Macon, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—With one day more remaining before the open golf tournament at the Idle Hour club, in which professionals from all parts of the country are entering, everything seems set for the best exhibition of golfing here since Jim Barnes and Jack Hutchison defeated Bobby Jones and Jack Vake on the club course a year ago. The greens have been dressed carefully for days, and the fairways are freshly cut. The touch of spring in the air today appealed strongly to the professionals already here. All of them went out at some time during the day and the brand of weather experienced was made to order for golfing.

Only two more entrants made their arrival today. Walter J. Benish and Ray Feller, both of the Oak Hill Country club at Rochester, N. Y., reached Macon about noon. Fred McLeod, Washington; Tom Boyd, Fox Hills; Bob Peabody, Louisville; Jack Forester, Deal; Fred Mirron, Pitts; Larry Nahloltz, Lima; Ohio; George Christ, Rochester; Tom Rapp, Summit Golf club, N. J.; Lewis Myers, Providence, and Phil Gentile, Providence, have been in town for several days.

Scores turned in after the rounds today were an improvement over those of the day before. Benish, shooting a 72, had the lowest card reported. Barrois and Nahloltz defeated Peabody and Dr. Selden, 2 up and 1 to play. Barrois' steady work featuring Peabody got a 73 and Nahloltz and Dr. Selden each came in with 78. The same match will be played again Wednesday afternoon.

If golfers who have played on courses the country over are any authority, the Idle Hour course is one of the sportiest in the United States. Those questioned could hardly say enough for it.

"They could not have a better layout," said Gentile. "All of the holes are different, and require different tactics. No. 6 is surely a long one, and it is there that the test is made." In his opinion, though No. 8 is the great feature of the whole course. You have to play golf on that one, and you certainly have to place your shots."

Championship Affair.—"All I know to say about it," was Rapp's comment, "is that it is a championship course."

Then Bob Peabody became eloquent

FT. M'PHERSON FIVE TAKE TWO CONTESTS

The Fort McPherson quintets were winners in two contests Tuesday night, completely outplaying their opponents in every department of the game. The first game was with the Gordon Street Presbyterian team and the Fort came out on the long end of the 46 to 16 score. Grant and Morris were the stars of the game. After being out of form for some time Morris evidently came into his own. For Gordon Street, Boswell was the most consistent player, making 8 of the 16 points scored.

Federal Reserves Lose.

In the second game with the Federal Reserve bank quint the Fort team ran up a score that stands out for this season, the final count being 74 to 20. Grant's exceptional basket-shooting was one of the big factors, he having made 36 of the 74, but Morris came in for almost as much glory, having scored 23 points. The big center played rings around his man, and was all over the floor. While the score was one-sided, all who were present were impressed with the clean sportsmanship of the Federal Reserve. These players are to be complimented on their clean playing. Doyle, for the Fort team, was the best, making 12 of the 20 points scored by his team.

TECH BACK FROM TRIP

From the standpoint of victory, the recent basketball road trip undertaken by the Tech Yellow Jackets was disastrous, ultimately so. But a great deal of satisfaction comes in knowing that all these defeats are had as far as they go, but they don't mean anything. The most sincere hope is that Tech has rid her system of all defeats, and can now go through the tourney with a clear slate.

It was more or less expected that Alabama should win its game, but the B. A. C. and the Mississippi games came as a complete surprise. And more so, since both teams had been beaten rather frequently by five supposed to be as strong as Tech.

Vandy beat Mississippi earlier in the season, and Tech was supposed to rate as high, if not higher, than Vandy in the basketball world. All the boys were worn out with the long trip and in the Alabama game did not play up to true form. But no alibi is offered, Mississippi has a good team, and played the better ball on that night. It's not long until the cross-country and most of the freshmen are practicing for that event. March 17 is the date set, and many freshmen have already promised other parties half of their cake. A trifle premature, but still freshmen as a whole are not responsible.

About 125 cakes will be given away this year to the men finishing first. In addition, a cup is given to the winner of the event. Also, the winner will be given a varsity track letter. This is the only opportunity a freshman has of making a varsity letter, and many are eager to try for the coveted "T." It is a long pull and takes lots of steam to finish. Any one winning that letter will have earned it all right.

Played at Disadvantage.

In most of her games this year Georgia has played on foreign territory and has been handicapped by the disadvantages of strange courts and long jumps between games. Now that they have had a short rest for Thursday's game and all of the men are in good shape. They will be at their best against the Atlanta invaders.

COLLINS BEST SECOND SACKER IN BASEBALL HISTORY

McGraw Outlines Reasons For Naming Various Men To Places on His All-Star

Ty Cobb, Hugh Duffy and Willie Keeler Easily the Greatest Outfielders John McGraw Has Seen In Action.

BY JOHN J. MCGRAW.

I doubt if anybody will dispute my selection of Eddie Collins as the greatest second baseman of all time and, therefore, entitled to a place on the all-American team of all time. At any rate, there is no doubt in my mind about it. In picking him I have been fully mindful of the greatness of such men as Napoleon Lajoie. It's pretty hard to select any team and leave Lajoie off. Still, Eddie Collins, in my opinion, is entitled to the honor.

There is nothing that Collins does not know about playing that important position. The Giants played against Eddie in several world's championship games in which we were defeated. I have been a staunch admirer of that young man's ability ever since. I saw him make his first play and, as a pivot man on a double play, I don't remember ever having seen his equal. As an all-around man he is superb. Not only does he play the game but he thinks it. Rare are the occasions when Collins does not anticipate the play. To cross him is almost impossible. And he is just as forceful on the offensive as the defensive. His mental attitude is an inspiration to his fellow players.

In the selection of a shortstop there is no going behind the returns. I doubt if there is a baseball man in the United States who would not select Hans Wagner for shortstop for any team no matter how great, without a moment's hesitation. I have never heard of anybody pointing to a man as the possible peer of Wagner. He stands out above all. In these memoirs I have already devoted a chapter to show that I think Hans Wagner the greatest ball player that ever lived, regardless of position.

NEVER LOCATED HANS' WEAKNESS.

If Wagner had any weakness as a batter we never discovered it. On occasions he would strike out on an outcurve. The next time he was likely to hit the same kind of a curve out of the lot.

Wagner had a faculty of hitting hard balls as well as good ones. He would make up his mind to hit, and hit he would, regardless of what the pitcher gave him. He always stood in the far corner of the box and would run into the ball, swinging with a deadly accuracy. On the defensive, Wagner would throw from any position, and he had a pair of hands that never failed him. It was a common saying among ball players that Wagner never made a wild peg in his life.

Hans Wagner will go down in baseball history as the greatest of all time. I believe he could have played several more years than he did. There have been many great third basemen, and I have had several on my teams, but in my mind, there is no question that the honor of the all-American third baseman of all time should go to Jimmy Collins. Incidentally, Jimmy Collins and Eddie Collins are not related.

I select Jimmy for his general excellence as a fielder, a hitter and a man. He was a great fellow on and off the field and a credit to baseball. Jimmy Collins was particularly adept at going for bunts. The art of bunting had just come into being when Collins began playing third base and he was one of the first to solve this style of play. I remember very well a game in which we had the opposing third baseman standing on his head trying to handle these tantalizing little bunts. Collins was playing the outfield. He was called in. In a few innings, it seemed, he had completely blocked our efforts.

Jimmy Collins was an originator, the real pioneer of the modern style of playing third base. He is clearly entitled to the all-American honor.

DUFFY PLACED IN OUTFIELD.

In the outfield I have selected Hugh Duffy, of the old Boston champions, as the all-American left-fielder. Fans of today do not remember Duffy quite so well as the younger men, but they should. Not only was he a marvelous fielder but he was one of the hardest hitters the game has ever known. Duffy is not a large man but, my, how he could sting that ball! In Boston old fans still relate some of his picturesque catches in the outfield.

Duffy first played center field for the Boston. After they won the championship in 1897 and 1898, though, he was shifted to the left field and played there to the end of his career. Duffy is one of the few men to hit as high as 400. He also was a great base runner and had team spirit.

Ty Cobb is outstanding as a center-fielder, a base runner and a batter. There is little use in me going into details about him. Everybody has seen Ty Cobb and knows his ability.

The mere fact that he led the American league in many years in success and is still a premier with the bat is sufficient. His aggressiveness is even a greater factor. There have been many ball players who could play the outfield as well as Cobb, but none of them had his combination of speed, aggressiveness and quick thinking.

If I doubt it anybody will dispute Ty Cobb's claim to the honor as the all-American center fielder of all time. For many years I have selected Willie Keeler for right field. Poor Willie died on New Year's day, 1923, after a long illness—heart trouble. When he passed out one of the greatest lights that ever shone in baseball was dimmed. I played on the same team with Keeler, the Orioles, and I knew him like a book, knew his ability in every department of the game.

PLAYED BIG PART IN COPPING "RAGS."

At bat Keeler and myself were a team that helped to win many a pennant. I led off and he followed. If I may be permitted to say so, Keeler was a strong right fielder, a good style of hitting to advance the runner, a form of attack that had never been given much attention up to 1894. In previous chapters I have discussed Keeler's batting, but I have no hesitation in placing Willie Keeler as the greatest right fielder of all time—God rest his soul!

It has been very hard to leave Joe Kelley off that regular outfield. In recognition of his greatness and to do him justice I have placed him on my all-American team as the extra outfielder. From my personal association with Kelley on the old Orioles and from my daily observation of his work I am strongly convinced that Joe in his day was as good a man for the position as any of those who preceded him or followed him. In considering this matter I have gone over all the great ones, including such men as George Burns, Jimmy McEuer, and many others. Some of them were weak in certain spots, like hitting or base running. Joe had no prominent weakness. He was fast on the bases, could hit the ball hard and was as graceful an outfielder as one would care to see. He covered an immense amount of ground and had that necessary faculty, so prominent in Speaker and others, of being able to place himself where the batter would be likely to hit the ball.

Joe Kelley was a great ball player. I wouldn't be satisfied if I didn't have him on my all-star team. I have a hunch that some of our friends—maybe some old strangers—will write in and ask me to explain why I left certain men off my team. It is enough to explain my selections. It would be impossible to discuss those left off.

In the next chapter I will explain my selections of pitchers. (Copyright, 1922, by the Christy Walsh Syndicate in the United States and Canada.)

PHILIA FIVE WINS 17-16

BY ADELE ANDERSON.

The Philia club won over Central by one point Tuesday night. You might think that nothing more need be said, but any one who saw the game would tell you differently. Central is not easy to beat and the score of 17 to 16 was only made after a long, hard fight.

Even after saying this we must add that Central was not playing its best. Any team that has won the games the Central five has is a good team.

Central started off fine. Weber gave eight points to the score in the first third. Mary Kendrick added two more, but Cassels of Philia, shot a field goal and two personal fouls. Hunter shot a goal and Paxton threw a long and very pretty one. The first third was in Central's favor, 10 to 8.

Only one goal was made in the second third. This and the intense excitement that prevailed. The goal was made by Cassels, Philia's "sharp-shooter." Paxton then threw in a beautiful field goal. This made the score 10-10.

The last third began with a rush. Martha Kendrick, of Central, shot a field goal and two personal fouls. Paxton, of Philia, shot a field goal and Cassels two more fouls. Again the score was a tie. The game ended 14 and 14. Mary Kendrick threw another goal which was not counted.

Five minutes was added because of the tie. In this extra period both teams did some wild playing, probably caused by excitement. Weber scored again for Central with two points. Cassels followed suit for Philia. For the third time the game was tied and then Cassels decided the final score by shooting another foul.

The Line-Up.

Y. W. C. A. is Winner.

The Y. W. C. A. five scored 13 to Westminster's 6 in the game Tuesday night. The game was not a hard one, but there was some very pretty playing. This, of course, may always be said when the Y. is playing.

NOTES ON BASEBALL

BY M. D. GLEASON.

"Bunker Hill" Sold.

The Spartanburg club has just sold "Bunker" Hill, its star pitcher, to St. Paul. "Bunker" had a great year last season and many teams were marketing for him but the "Saints" made the best offer.

J. C. Prothro, the brilliant ball player of Dyersburg, Tenn., who attracted so much attention last year, has been signed by Minneapolis to play shortstop for the "Millers" this year. This is another case of a good player's ability being recognized by the smart scouts of this league, whose specialty seems to be picking good ball players from Divisland.

Newton Beats Rival.

Newton (Ala.) beat Pinchard (Ala.) 10 to 0 in the first game of the season between these old rivals the other day. Everybody in Newton is giving "Shovel" Hodge, former White Sox pitcher, the credit for this game, as he has been coaching the Newton boys for several weeks. They were in almost midsummer form and put it all over their ancient rivals.

Deprived of the "greatest prep school basketball player the south has ever produced"—now using Coach Charlie Morgan's statement—the Lanier High school basketball team, G. I. A. A. champion of last year, must defend its title this week somewhat weakened by the loss of Young Stribling through official decree, but still far from being a set-up for any other team in the running.

Coach Morgan is a man well-versed in athletics, basketball particularly. He knows his stuff thoroughly and as he must have had a sneaking suspicion all along that Commissioner Alexander could render no decision save that Young Stribling, a professional box fighter, could not qualify as an amateur athlete, it isn't saying too much to assert that Morgan has taken every precaution to see that Stribling's place would be filled when he time came for the youngster to turn in his uniform.

"Strib" wasn't the only star on Morgan's roster; he chanced to be but the most brilliant. The Lanier coach probably had at his disposal all along a boy good enough to win a place on the average high school quintet, but when Young Stribling, a professional box fighter, could not qualify as an amateur athlete, it isn't saying too much to assert that Morgan has taken every precaution to see that Stribling's place would be filled when he time came for the youngster to turn in his uniform.

So if the four Atlanta basket teams that will take part in the G. I. A. A. tournament which gets under way today at Macon, are looking for anything soft when steering Stribling, a professional box fighter, could not qualify as an amateur athlete, it isn't saying too much to assert that Morgan has taken every precaution to see that Stribling's place would be filled when he time came for the youngster to turn in his uniform.

The Bibb county basketball team still bear plenty of watching, folks.

Tompkins Wants Nothing "Soft."

If this correspondent had his way about it, he would insist that various prize fight managers, forever hunting something "soft" for their pugilists, take a course of instruction from Tommy Tompkins, who has stung little Claude Wilson to a pretty fair rating among the bantamweights of the country. Tompkins went out after real competition the day his boy turned professional and he has been at it ever since.

Now that he has put Claude on a sound basis, financially and otherwise, Tommy finds time to look after still another bantamweight, Jimmy Prato, and a fine lot of business has already been outlined for the new-comer. There isn't a set-up in the bunch. Jimmy gets his southern training Monday night against Tim O'Dowd in Birmingham. Tim isn't exactly "soft." Mr. Babe Asher, Pal Moore and others will testify.

It is simply Tommy's way of bringing up his fighters. After a boxer has passed a certain stage in his development, there is no reason why he should be kept on a steady diet of weak opponents, Tompkins argues. The youngster picks up things when pitted against veterans, even if there is a certain amount of canyans investigating involved.

Tommy is a strong believer in the theory that it doesn't seriously affect one of his boys to get licked by a top-notch.

Tim O'Dowd Was Undecided Once.

Here is something you probably didn't know about Timothy O'Dowd, the young man mentioned previously in this yarn: He came within an inch of becoming a professional baseball player before he decided there was more of the filthy stuff called long green in the profession he finally chose. M. D. Gleason, who writes interestingly on semi-professional and sandlot baseball for The Constitution, told us the story yesterday.

Tim, according to Colonel Gleason, was the diamond sensation of his particular section of the city. So good in fact was the youngster—remember he is only 18 years old now and all this happened some time ago—that the late Charlie Frank, always packing a warm spot in his heart for young players, sent for Tim to report at Ponce de Leon in order to see just what promise the kid showed.

The Dutchman must have been impressed, for it is understood that he offered Tim a bit of spending money to stick around with the players and watch the game from the bench. But in the meantime O'Dowd, or Charlie Bowyer as his real name—had been trying out his fists and loved to scrap.

Then he won some sort of amateur championship and decided to turn professional. He was stopped in one round by Young Stribling, who was then a bantamweight, but that didn't discourage Timothy. It made him all the more determined to succeed in the ring game and he gave up all thought of ever becoming a diamond star and devoted the whole of his attention toward becoming a real fighter.

FORFEIT GAME TO SEMINARY

Because of the failure of one of the substitutes of the Fulton girls' five to report promptly to the referee as she entered the basketball game played at Emory university yesterday afternoon, the contest was forfeited to the Washington Seminary quint.

This brought a roar of disapproval from the Fulton supporters, who stoutly maintained that the substitute reported. At this point the score stood 13 all with less than 3 minutes to play.

The game was close throughout with Fulton leading at the end of the first third 6 and 5, and Seminary holding the upper hand at the end of the second third 10 and 8.

Fulton tallied five field goals while Seminary was only able to locate the basket three times by this route, the remainder of the points coming from free throws. The guarding of Moore and Zachery for Fulton was the feature of the game, while Terrell at forward played well. Napier and Rawlings played best for Seminary.

Commercial High Only Five From Atlanta That Appears On Schedule for First Day

Local Quintet Will Meet Griffin High Tonight and Gordon and G. M. C. Will Renew Their Ancient Scrap.

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Macon the G. I. A. A. basketball tournament will get under way with Gordon and G. M. C. furnishing the opposition, closely followed by Commercial and Griffin High. Coach Holt will leave Atlanta some time today with some eight or nine of the Commercial players and will play in the second game tonight.

Tech High, University and Boys' High will not go down until Thursday at noon as neither of the teams plays until Thursday afternoon and night. Each of the four Atlanta teams will carry nine men down.

The Commercial High players to make the trip with Coach Holt will be Doss and Hartman, forwards; Walsh, center; Foster, and Superstein, guards; Caudle, Rudderman, Wilkey and Smith.

Tech High will be represented by Coach Tolbert, Captain Breck and George, guards; Bell, center; Perry and Morris, forwards; Wodall, Guilfrida, James and Hewin.

On the Boys' High list will be Stephens, for center; Rankin and O'Dwyer, forwards; Jameson and Gibbs, guards; Martin, Roane, Brown and Hirsch, as substitutes.

Coach Boon of University will carry along the same team that entered the Cotton States tournament. The complete list will be Freeman and Broadnax, guards; Quarles, center; Angley and Medlin, forwards; Nunnally, Wilder, Boswell and Murray for substitutes.

Everything Ready.

Reports from Macon are to the effect that everything is in readiness for the big tournament and that nothing remains undone in the planning of the tournament for the Central City.

The recent ruling of W. A. Alexander, commissioner of the G. I. A. A. that young Stribling will not be eligible to participate, has caused Coach Charlie Morgan of the Lanier High team to change his plans.

All Macon hopes to see Strib sitting on the bench in civilian clothes in place of the regular knee tows, but the fans have not given up hope. Lanier high will be represented and will show some other teams quite a bit of tricks in basketball.

Lanier High has just completed a run of 32 straight victories and the Orange and Blue team is ready to go into the tourney with a more determined spirit to win since its favorite has been barred. The string of victories started early last season, and ran through the tournament last year and on through the present season without being molested.

There will be 10 teams entered in the tourney and it will consume all the latter part of the week. The teams represented will be the four Atlanta entrants already mentioned, Riverside, Monroe A. & M., Lanier High, Gordon, Griffin and G. M. C.

Not to Compete.

It is unfortunate that G. M. A. winners of the Cotton States tourney, is not listed as an entrant, but it is fortunate for those that have already cast their hats into the ring. The Atlanta teams, with the exception of Commercial, will hold a short, light scrimmage this afternoon and will prepare to board a train early Thursday.

The tournament seems to be a magnet for local fans, as quite a large number intend to go down Friday and Saturday. There will be many motor parties to make the trip.

Atlanta is keenly interested in the fate of the four Atlanta entrants and the results will be closely watched. Prep basketball seems to have a grip on fans around the city and they are hoping for the best in the tourney.

The pairings have already been announced and it will be seen that several grudge battles will take place. Gordon and G. M. C. meet in the first, and University and Riverside follow with another on the second night.

LOT OF INTEREST IN GOLF TOURNEY

Ashbur, Ga., February 20.—(Special.)—It was announced today that drawing for places in the second district basketball tournament, which is to be played here on March 1-3, was completed and that Captain Eddie and Lieutenant Smith of Fort Benning and a timekeeper from the Macon Telegraph would be the officials.

Local fans are looking forward to one of the best tournaments in the state from the list of entrants. A number of teams are among the best in this section and it is a question which will carry off the final honors. Among those with the best records are Cordale, Vienna, Andersonville, Leslie and Eastman.

"Great Caesar's Ghost," Cries Maxim As He Sees Stone Mountain First Time

Top: The wonderful projection machine which will throw pictures of the statuary, upon the face of Stone Mountain. Standing, left to right, are E. S. Porter, who invented and built the machine and gave it to Mr. Borglum for this work; Gutzon Borglum and Hudson Maxim. In the background are Mrs. Maxim, Miss Phillips, Mrs. Mason, Miss Nan Stephens and other ladies of the party. Bottom: Hudson Maxim listening to Gutzon Borglum, as he tells him how the great confederate memorial will look when at last it is carved upon the face of Stone Mountain.

These were the exact words with which Hudson Maxim, world-famed inventor and sculptor, tried to express his emotions as he stood, for the first time in his life, at the foot of Stone Mountain and gazed up its steep side of granite to the vast shoulder of its rounded top.

With white hair waving in the breeze, the old man whose name is known wherever white men have traveled, who ever the seven seas flow, stood at the side of Gutzon Borglum on Tuesday afternoon, and, with wedding gestures of his arms, with expressive glance from his sparkling eyes and with tongue which sought vain for adequate words, tried to tell the story of his emotions.

Mr. Borglum, who, as everybody knows, is engaged upon the gigantic task of carving a group of colossal figures representing the heroes of the Civil War, into the side of the mountain, explained to Mr. Maxim the plans and drawings for the great work. He showed him the stone, and as his words drew the picture before his hearers which will eventually stand for ages on the side of the mountain, Mr. Maxim stood in awe at the vastness of the conception.

"It's tremendous," he said at last. "It's the most stupendous thing I ever heard of. Its glory will overshadow anything in the world, old or new." Then he paused, and turning to the little group of men and women who were accompanying the party out to the mountain, said:

"And I want to tell you, in Gutzon, here, you've got the only man in the world who can do this. I don't know any other living man today who could have conceived the grandeur and greatness of the idea, nor had he conceived it, could he not have done it."

Disinherited Party.

The party had left Atlanta early Tuesday afternoon. Besides Mr. Maxim and Mr. Borglum, there were Mrs. Maxim, owner of Stone Mountain; E. S. Porter, of New York, president of the Precision Machine company—of whom there is another story to be told, a few lines further on—Mrs. Charles T. Phillips, president of Atlanta chapter, U. P.; Miss Nan Stephens, Mrs. Fred Mason and others.

Arriving at the mountain, first of all Mr. Borglum took Mr. Maxim half a mile or so away, to a spot in the middle of an old cornfield, where, standing amidst the blackened stalks of last year's crop, they could get their best and finest view of the mountain as a whole.

It was here that Mr. Maxim got his first overwhelming realization of the vastness of the mountain and the stupendous nature of the undertaking which the sculptor has begun. As he trudged down the dusty road back to the little wooden workshop, under the shadow of the mountain base, where Mr. Borglum directs his work, he exclaimed again and again at the magnificence of the bulk which towered before him.

Description Thrills Him.

Then, on the platform before the little shack, surrounded by people who have worked and hoped and prayed over the idea of the majestic confederate memorial, since its first inception, he demanded again that the whole thing be described to him as it will appear when completed.

As he was told how the line of marching men of stone will appear to be sweeping over the top of the mountain, to curve in eternal line of march across its great face, he stood in silence, gazing up the six-hundred-foot side of rock and softly muttering the distinctive features of a telescope, and a motion picture projection machine.

Then, here that Mr. Porter's story—promised a few paragraphs back—comes in.

Porter Gives Machine.

The machine was designed, perfected and presented by him to Mr. Borglum, for his work. It is one of the most beautiful developments in the art of building projecting machines. By it, Mr. Borglum will be able to throw, on the face of his mountain, the pictures of his statuary group, as they will finally appear. With these pictures shining on the rock the outlines and shading can be drawn in, ready for the work of the chisel and the hammer.

This machine was the result of Mr. Porter's enthusiasm in the work, endeavored earlier by Mr. Borglum, Mr. Porter, the President of the Precision Machine company, of New York, manufacturer of motion picture projection machines and similar inventions. It is, in simple language, such a machine which will enable Mr. Borglum to throw the pictures of his statuary group, as they will finally appear, on the face of his mountain, in sharp outline, in sharp outline.

See Venable Home.

A rapid trip to the other side of the mountain, where the new summer home of Mr. Borglum, Mr. Porter and Mr. Maxim was inspected, and Mr. Maxim returned to the city to rest for his engagements of the evening. As the speaking of the picture of his statuary group, which will enable Mr. Borglum to throw the pictures of his statuary group, as they will finally appear, on the face of his mountain, in sharp outline, in sharp outline.

"One Week of Love."

(At the Rialto.)

It is a strictly up-to-date story that is unfolded in "One Week of Love," at the Rialto theater, at the foot of Stone Mountain. The heroine is a modern girl—brave, resourceful and quick-witted—a regular, resourceful flapper. Miss Elaine Hammerstein is the star. As for the hero, he is not 100 per cent American manhood. Women don't like the model here and more. And so the leading man, played by a Monty Bello comedy, "Sailing Along" and the Rialto News and Views of the day.

"Dance Dreams."

(At Loew's Grand.)

"Dance Dreams," the fantastic dance spectacle that has been so favorably received at Loew's Grand theater since the first of the week, closes its Atlanta engagement with today and tonight's performances. Five pretty girls in beautiful costumes are seen in a series of character dances, centering about the theme of "Dance Dreams." The feature of the screen play is making a decided hit.

"Shadows."

(At the Metropolitan.)

The interpretation of the Chinese character has long been a favorite theme for screen plays but it is seen in an entirely new light in "Shadows," the preferred picture presented at the Metropolitan at the Metropolitan. The picture is based on Wilbur Daniel Steele's prize story, "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," which was acclaimed as one of the greatest stories of 1917. Chaney, in "Shadows," is the story of an Oriental that Confucius or some other Chinese sage must have been; kindly, benign and helpful.

The prohibition on importation and use of motor vehicles in Bermuda is still in effect. The New York office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce had been informed by some private firms that these restrictions were lifted, but on investigation this was found to be erroneous.

There was considerable agitation at the beginning of 1922 for a removal of these restrictions, but the act providing for this was defeated in the Bermuda house of assembly. It is the general opinion in Hamilton that this was found to be erroneous.

To the Delegates of the Boll-Weevil Control Conference

We are glad that we will have an opportunity of presenting to you, personally, the MERITS of BOLL-WE-GO, the Calcium Arsenate product—which stays on the Cotton plant regardless of weather conditions.

BOLL-WE-GO carries a higher percentage of Calcium Arsenate, per gallon, than any other liquid preparation on the market.

THE COMMON SENSE—MOST ECONOMICAL—and effective method of applying Calcium Arsenate.

Only Costs 20c a Gallon

Boll-We-Go only costs 20c a gallon. The MAXIMUM cost per acre, per season, is less than $4.00 per acre.

BOLL-WE-GO is unqualifiedly endorsed by the leading FLANTERS, BANKERS and MERCHANTS throughout the State of Georgia.

This product proved 100% effective in 26 Georgia counties last season. Boll-We-Go is registered and approved by the State Board of Agriculture of the State of Georgia.

Apply During Daytime--Eliminate Night Work

Boll-We-Go eliminates all night work, as it can be applied during the daytime. Boll-We-Go is applied with a Sprayer. We recommend for large tracts the American horse-drawn sprayer—14 to 16 acres can be covered each day with this sprayer. For small tracts we recommend a hand compressed-air sprayer, which we sell at a nominal cost.
